GREENSBORO Y.M.C.A.s TO MEET JANUARY 27

On Tuesday, January 27, 1970 the 82nd Annual Meeting of the Greensboro Y.M.C.A.s will be held at the Central Branch Y.M.C.A. at 7:00 p.m.

Guest speaker for the occasion will be Mr. Matthew Carter, the first Black Mayor of Montclair, N. J. Mr. Carter is a 26 year veteran in the Y.M.C.A. and is now serving his second year as Mayor of Montclair. He is a native of Danville, Va. and a graduate of Union University, Va. He has served as Executive Director of the Leigh Street Y.M.C.A., Richmond, Va.; Spring Street Y.M.C.A., Columbus, Ohio and as Associate Director of the Association Press of the National Y.M.C.A. office in New York City. He is presently employed as Manager of Community Affairs by the Hoffman-La Roche, Inc. of Nutley, N. J.

This year's Annual Meeting is outstanding in many ways. The YMCAs of Greensboro will become a Metropolitan unit — election of Board Members for the Greensboro Metropolitan Board of Directors will be presented — dinner will be served and many other features.

CHERRY AWAITS PRO GRID CONTRACT BY STARRING FOR A&T IN BASKETBALL

By Richard E. Moore

Spunky Daryle Cherry of North Carolina A&T is supposed to be waiting for a possible pro contract, but while he is waiting, his stock in basketball is also soaring.

Cherry, a muscle-bound senior from Charlotte, N. C., pumped in 20 points to lead the Aggies to an impressive 118-64 win over Livingstone College Tuesday night.

On Monday, Cherry scored 22 points as A&T dumped arch rival Winston-Salem, 84-77. The two wins boosted the nationally-eight-ranked Aggies' record to 10-0.

One of the most versatile athletes ever to play for A&T, Cherry kept the Aggies in the game with the Rams most of the first half with his long-range bombing. It was during the first period that he scored 18 of his points.

For awhile the Rams threatened to dethrone the Aggies. With aces Don Williams and Vaughn Kimbrough leading the attack, Winston-Salem managed a 41-39 halftime lead, then extended their margin to 59-48 with 13:22 left in the game.

At this point, A&T Coach Cal Irvin injected Marvin Morris and Chucky Evans, a pair of super sophomore subs into the game and the Aggies spurted to tie the score at 74-74 with 2:56 left to play.

Again it was tough defensive play by A&T that enabled the "Housing Specialist Program." The academic graduate seminar will be conducted at Immaculator College of Washington, D. C.

The recipient was associated with the Manpower Mobility Program of North Carolina before her work with the Guilford Council.

She is chairman of the Committee on Community Services of Shiloh Baptist Church, and a teacher in the Church School.

Engineering Scholarships Available In New A&T Cooperative Program

Officials at the A&T State University School of Engineering this week announced a search for six high school graduates to participate in an exciting new scholarship program conducted in connection with the Union-Carbide Corp.

According to Hardy Liston, Jr., coordinator of the program, students selected for the program will enter a cooperative work-study program with Union Carbide.

The students will spend the summer, prior to their entrance in college, working on projects at the company's Nuclear Division in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Following the summer employment, money will be available to the student for tuition, fees and room and board.

At the end of the freshman year, students in the program will again be given summer employment with the company, with a salary range beginning at $475 per month and extending over a period of three summers to $600.

"We are pleased to be involved in this new program designed to bring more talented blacks into the engineering field," said Hardy. Students interested in applying for one of the scholarships are asked to contact Liston at the School of Engineering at A&T. Deadline for applications is February 6, 1970.

"BLACK ACTORS ARE A COMMODITY" — J. WATSON

What's the whole Black scene on television coming to? Is it simply a "phase" which will be tossed aside when the networks and audiences eventually tire of it? Or will it grow in depth and image perception in years to come? Toss these questions at James Watson, young Black actor who recently guest-starred in the "Black Jade" segment of Universal Television's "The Virginian" series, and the answers are worth listening to.

"Despite what your emotions lead you to feel," Watson says emphatically, "you have to look at the overall situation objectively. Black actors are a commodity like anything else, though for a long while their 'resale value' was in doubt.

"Thus far they've had, for the most part, bad, insensitive scripts shoved at them, but we're coming to the end of that era. Producers haven't really known how to relate and depict true Black situations; they didn't know where truth and fantasy separated. As far as I can tell, there'll still be maybe a year or two more of this kind of floundering before we enter the next phase."

That "next phase," according to Watson, will be a kind of anything written by Black writers is O.K. period and he sees it as an unfortunate, though understandable, circumstance.

"But naturally," he continues, "that isn't the answer either. Perhaps after that we'll enter a really meaningful era where Black actors who've been in the business a long time will become producers and writers and turn out material where people can be depicted as people — period. Maybe then we can project militancy regardless of race; identity for the sake of individual identity, not because of a particular racial stereotype.

"Does the Black actor owe any responsibility to the Black community, including the militant factions? Of course he does, though he must seek a compromise in the really meaningful sense of the word. And compromise isn't implied to mean either 'giving in' to militant Blacks or 'copping out' to the white establishment. It's simply trying to find a calm and intelligent meeting ground that is non-emotional.

"I can see where an outspoken, militant minority of Blacks should speak out — even arrogantly — against a lot that's going on in our country today. But when it comes to television,

GREENSBORO MAN MEETS CHIEF OF NAVY CHAPLAINS (DA NANG) — Boatswain's Mate, Second Class James F. George of Greensboro got the chance to meet the Navy's most senior chaplain recently.

George talked with Rear Admiral James W. Kelly, Chief of Navy Chaplains, who spent his Christmas holidays visiting U.S. Naval Support Activity (NSA), Da Nang, Republic of Vietnam.

BM2 George, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. George of Route 9, Greensboro, is a driver of an escort jeep for Rear Admiral R. E. Adamson Jr., Commander, NSA. The jeep drivers act as security guards and help control traffic for quick passage of the admiral's vehicle.

Meeting senior officers is not something new to George, who spent his first duty station aboard the admiral's barge at Commander, Anti-Submarine Warfare Force, Pacific, in San Diego. He has been at NSA, Da Nang, since March 1968.

George was graduated from Northwest Guilford High in Greensboro in 1966. He joined the Navy Nov. 22, 1966. Since the beginning of his tour in Vietnam, he has extended here for two six-month periods beyond the normal 12-month tour of duty.

RACIAL DIFFERENCE IS MYTH, SAYS A&T PROFESSOR IN STUDY

Winston-Salem, N. C. — The chairman of the physical education department of North Carolina A&T University in Greensboro last week refuted studies which have been made comparing the physical differences in Negroes and whites.

Dr. Ray Moore said he thinks differences in the physical characteristics of Negroes and whites are a myth, especially the idea that they effect athletic activity. "Race itself is a myth," he said.

Moore spoke at Wake Forest University to an audience of physical education majors. His lecture was sponsored by the physical education department of Wake Forest.

He cited nine studies made from the 1800s to the present, and in each study, he said, he thinks the people studied did not represent a wide enough sample of the population.

At the beginning of his talk he said that he has concluded from the nine studies that much more work remains to be done before any definite statement can be made about fundamental physical differences between Negroes and whites.

Some of the nine studies concluded that Negroes are superior to whites in weight, but not in height. Negroes were found to it wouldn't be fair for a very vocal minority to suppress what is in reality a somewhat more moderate majority in terms of the type of Black image projected on TV screens.

"If true honesty is to be achieved on film," Watson concludes, "it must be approached soberly. Not at a heated bargaining table, but with the Black community's own 'silent majority' in mind."

be in better physical shape than whites in one study, but the Negroes had a higher mortality rate.

One study concluded that Negroes are superior to whites in some sports and inferior to whites in other sports.

Negroes were once thought to be superior in such track events as high jumping, sprints and weight events. But recent Olympic competitions have shown whites beating Negroes in events thought to belong to the Negro athletes. In those same Olympics Negroes beat whites in traditionally strong white events like distance running.

The superiority of various athletes in different racial groups is probably more due to psychological and environmental factors than to basic physical differences, Moore said.

He suggested that studies look more closely at training methods than to racial differences. "Performance in sports is a result of training more so than of so-called native ability," he said.
