Annual Fellowship Dinner To Be Held At S. E. Branch Y.W.C.A.

Mrs. Eva Clayton will give the address at the Annual Fellowship Dinner at the YWCA, Southeast Branch on March 5, 1970 at 7:00 p.m. according to Mrs. Harold Bragg, Chairman of the Membership Activities Committee. Currently Field Secretary for the Economic Development Corporation in Warrenton, North Carolina, Mrs. Clayton was a candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives in May, 1968. She serves on the Democratic Study Commission and is Chairman of the Second Congressional District Association.

According to Mrs. Clayton, the Economic Development Corporation seeks to "bridge the information gap for the poor and disadvantaged. The corporation was organized in response to the fact that the disadvantaged who lived in Eastern North Carolina failed to be significantly benefited by the many federally-enacted programs. There is definitely an information gap between programs designed to assist the poor and the poor themselves".

The EDC seeks to inform citizens of State and Federal programs which are designed to assist in economic growth. The Corporation has made it possible for the poor to personally question Federal administrators and to speak for themselves, describing their plight to the public.

Tickets for the YWCA Fellowship Dinner are $2.50 and should be bought at the YWCA, Southeast Branch or at Davie Street YWCA, 314 N. Davie St.

Mother of A&T Development Head Passes in Southport Hosp.

Southport, N. C. — Mrs. Maggie J. Williams, 85, mother of Dr. Frederick A. Williams, director of planning and development at A&T State University, died Sunday in a Southport hospital after a short illness.

A native of Beaufort, N. C., Mrs. Williams was a graduate of Morris Brown College, Atlanta, and formerly taught school in Beaufort.

Besides Dr. Williams, she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Olive Daniel, Southport; Mrs. Inez Williams, Beaufort; and Miss Mary Williams, New Jersey; two sons, Ralph Williams, Newport and B. Williams, New York City; six grandchildren and one great grandchild.

THANK YOU

The members of the J. A. Booker family wish to thank their many friends for the kindness shown them during their bereavement.

Thank you,
(Mrs.) Irene W. Booker

A&T Husband-Wife Research Team Win $102,000 For Study On Diets

A new research project at A&T State University could provide a breakthrough in the search for a rapid method of diagnosing protein deficiency in underfed persons.

Dr. Gerald Edwards, director of the division of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and his wife, Dr. Cecile Edwards, chairman of the Department of Home Economics, have been awarded $102,000 for the three-year study.

Sponsors of the project are the National Institutes of Health, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"We believe that this research is significant in that it will aid in understanding malnutrition," said Dr. Cecile Edwards. "In addition, it may suggest alternative methods for early treatment of severe protein malnutrition and provide information of value in improving diets based on cereal grains."

"We are also concerned how poorly fed persons use protein in general," she added. "A large percentage of the world population suffers—from inadequate protein intake, particularly in Central and South America, Asia and Africa."

Dr. Edwards said this is true because in those countries, cereal grains, such as rice and corn often provide the main dietary staple. She said that protein malnutrition, called kwashiorkor, is particularly prevalent in children between the ages of one and four.

Dr. Gerald Edwards said the project will be called a study of the "Metabolism of Methionine in Protein Deficiency."

He said that methionine is one of the amino acids in protein such as that normally found in meat, eggs and milk.

"Proteins are formed by linking together of several amino acids, some of which must be supplied by food and are termed essential," he stated, "and others which the body can make from nitrogen sources. Methionine is one of the essential amino acids in proteins."

Dr. Edwards said that in diets which contain a large proportion of foods from plant sources, amino acid and certain others may not be present in adequate amounts and this may affect growth of children and maintenance of tissues in adults.

The two scientists said the study will be conducted on rats. They will induce malnutrition by using radio-active samples of methionine. By using the radioactive samples, Dr. and Mrs. Edwards hope to observe how the body makes protein.

Dr. Cecile Edwards said that the A&T project represents a second phase of adding basic biochemical information which will be useful to scientists in the fields of nutrition, biology and medicine. She said the first series of studies on the utilization of methionine, also sponsored by the National Institutes of Health, was completed in 1968, following eleven years of intensive work.

A&T President Denounces Rumors About Possible Merger With UNC-G

Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, president of A&T State University, last week moved to calm students on his campus who were troubled by rumors of a merger between A&T and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Dowdy pledged "all resources available to me" to see that A&T keeps its identity in the higher education structure in North Carolina.

Dr. Dowdy told students, faculty members and residents of Greensboro's black community his position on the question of merger is a matter of public record and has been stated three times in the past.

But, for the benefit of those who had not seen his statement he reiterated, "I am not in favor of merging A&T with UNC-G nor UNC-G with A&T."

"These two institutions have different programs and serve a different clientele. You may be assured I will use all the resources available to me to see to it A&T maintains its identity in the future structure of higher education in North Carolina."

"No official of the state board of higher education, state government, state department of health, education and welfare has mentioned the subject of merger. I think the rumor is unfounded and I ask the students and community to put away fears and work to unite A&T State University and to make it a more viable force in our society."

He said he understood the student-faculty-community concern about the possibility of merger.

Elsewhere the student government association conducted workshops on the merger question and other topics they felt would be of interest to the university community.

"I can understand their concern about the possibility of merger of this university with another institution because of recent reports in the press."
