eyes were filled with tears of happiness.

This story reminds us that love must be genuine; a pretense simply will not do. It also reminds us that love must flow through the small, everyday parts of our life. How easy it is to feel love for mankind in general, but how difficult to show your secretary or the milkman!

Love Through Joint Action

Traditional Christian charity has been person to person. An impersonal age such as ours has a crying need for persons to give their time and energy to relate to others, whether in hospitals, homes for the aged, or community centers. But there is another side of the coin, one that we recognize less clearly, perhaps.

We are living in an age when direct action is not always possible. Indeed, we must come to grips with the fact that individual action does not — and perhaps cannot — go far enough. Why? In part, because it tends to deal only with the symptoms and not with the disease. Here is how one author describes the disease, terming it "the vicious circle of poverty".

"The poor get sick more than anyone else in the society. That is because they live in slums, jammed together under unhygienic conditions; they have inadequate diets, and cannot get decent medical care. When they become sick, they are sick longer than any other group in the society. Because they are sick more often and longer than anyone else, they lose wages and work, and find it difficult to hold a steady job. And because of this, they cannot pay for good housing, for a nutritious diet, for doctors. At any given point in the circle, particularly when there is a major illness, their prospect is to move to an even lower level and to begin the cycle, round and round, toward even more suffering."

The author goes on to point out that an individual is almost totally helpless in trying to break out of the vicious circle. Only society at large, he believes, can really provide the resources and the political strength to break the chain reaction. The story of the dentist in Chicago made this same point. What form would organized assistance take in your community? What stance or style of life does our Scripture suggest that we Christians should assume?

Lord, give us the strength to love, not in general, but in specific ways. In everyday acts of concern and kindness may we reflect our commitment to your cause. Amen.
