RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WE' AT BENNETT COLLEGE

Today for the average black student, involvement in the turbulent issues of our time is inescapable. Similarly, the turmoil in the black religious experience is affecting all of us, thus there is a call for spiritual renewal. Just as the Spring season brings renewal within the cycle of life so does Lent signify resurrection and new life. Recognizing the historical and sociological effect of black religion on us today, one can well understand the need for the black university student to be totally involved in his rich background of religious experience and through it all perhaps find a sense of direction of his being and identity. Recognizing too as Professor Edsel Ammons of Garrett Theological Seminary said, "that the black religion does not need any props for worship or celebration," the Students for Christian Social Concern have planned this week of happening for your spiritual renewal.

Perhaps Lent is also a time to reflect and to remember. But our memory should not be of anger alone but love, not only frustration and despair, but joy and hope, not only of sorrow but laughter, and reflections on those moments and things that cement our relationships. There should not be any "solitariness" or "lostness" no uselessness or apathy but peace and joy in vibrant celebration of life and hope for the future. And our prayer should be for peace among all men and sisterhood on our campus.

It is only natural for a people who love life in its fullest to be resurrected with Christ at Easter and to proclaim the new life in celebration. Ours then is a celebration of hope, liberation, and love, and we mean to use all the traditional modes of a black worship. The Jesus figure will be felt in preaching as we see him actively going around healing the sick and freeing individuals from oppression. And the religious gospel music will be used in all the celebrations with jazz and enough room left for spontaneity and the spirit to work. Finally in the Lord's Supper the body and the blood of Jesus is portrayed to take on added significance as we experience the agony and suffering that comes to those who struggle and work for the liberation of mankind. This then is what we hope for.

PEACE, LOVE, HAPPINESS, AND POWER!
