Discussing the five-week field experience in inner-urban problems in teacher education are (l-to-r) Dr. Rosolia Cioffi, coordinator of the teacher education program at Rutgers in Camden; Dr. Dorothy Prince, chairman of the department of education at Greensboro A&T State University; Lizzie Miles of LaGrange, N. C., a home economics major; and Paul Jones of Kinston, N. C., a social studies major. The main purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for senior teacher education students to learn about the distinctive problems of urban life and education in an urban setting through the facilities of Rutgers in cooperation with Camden schools. There are five participants in the program who are being housed in private homes in the city.

A & T SENIORS STUDY PROBLEMS OF URBAN LIFE AND EDUCATION

Camden, April 1—A field laboratory experience in inner-urban problems in teacher education is being conducted with five seniors from Greensboro A & T State University in North Carolina.

The project has been planned by Dr. Rosolia Cioffi, coordinator of the teacher education program at the Rutgers urban center here, in cooperation with Theodore E. Johnson, assistant superintendent of Camden City Schools, and James T. Ricks, director of the Rutgers Bureau of Community Services.

The main purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for senior teacher education majors to learn about the distinctive problems of urban life and education in an urban setting through the facilities of Rutgers University.

Other objectives include fostering competence in dealing with urban problems in education and providing a means of evaluating the urban teaching preparatory program at A & T State University through the performance and "feed-back" of the students participating in the project.

It is also hoped that the materials and resources developed by the team during these five weeks will serve as the basis for a seminar in urban education to be incorporated into the curricula at both institutions. Participants in the project, who are being housed in private homes in Camden, include Shirley Belk of Charlotte, Paul Jones of Kinston, Lizzie Miles of LaGrange and Milton Ryan of Edenton.

Selection of the student teachers was based upon interest in teaching in an inner-urban community, adaptability, scholarship, recommendations from academic departments, health, background including travel and employment, and parental approval.

At Rutgers, they are spending their time observing and teaching in the city schools, on field excursions to metropolitan agencies, attending official meetings of urban deliberative and decision-making bodies and community organizations, and visiting nearby schools in Philadelphia and Camden suburbs.

While five weeks is being devoted to the field experience,

The Veterans Corner

Editor's Note: Veterans and their dependents are asking thousands of questions concerning the benefits their Government provides for them through the Veterans Administration. Below are some representative queries. Additional information may be obtained at any VA office.

Q — Does the VA provide any educational program for veterans disabled in military service?

A — Yes. There is a rehabilitation program for veterans who suffered serious service-connected disabilities. For information on this program, contact the nearest VA office, or your local service organization representative.

Q — I am a World War II veteran and the VA has advised me that I can carry only $10,000 worth of Government Life Insurance. Is this true?

A — Yes. The maximum of $10,000 in VA insurance coverage is established by law.

Q — I was hospitalized in a VA facility for more than 21 days for an injury I received on my job. Would I be entitled to a temporary VA 100 per cent rating for this period of hos-
