A&T STATE UNIVERSITY SEEKING $12 MILLION FOR IMPROVEMENTS

A $12,054,000 package of capital improvement requests were issued to the state's Advisory Budget Commission last week by A&T State University.

On a whirl-wind tour of North Carolina's public colleges, the commission spent an hour receiving A&T Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy's presentation asking for monies to construct a $2.8 million Natural Science Building, a $1.52 million Social Science Building and a $1.5 million Art-Humanities Center.

Chancellor Dowdy painted a picture of the University's growth to 4,400 undergraduate students in 1971 and also emphasized the attainment of national accreditation by four of the school's departments.

The Commissioners, chaired by State Sen. Thomas White, noted that the Natural Science Building is needed to house mathematics, physics and physical science departments which will affect about 1,000 of A&T's 4,445 students next fall.

Presently, Dowdy said, the courses are crammed into other buildings.

A similar situation exists, he said, in the social sciences, necessitating the $1.5 million request for a building to house those programs. In addition, he said, the building would provide badly needed office space for 35 professors.

In reference to the Art-Humanities Center, Dowdy said that art courses have had to share space in the music building, which needs to be devoted to music students. The $1.5 million facility, he said, would provide space for the art curriculum as well as a gallery for the display of art.

"This would be a positive way for blacks to achieve identity," said Dowdy.

Other items in the A&T request were: Pre-School Laboratory, $569,000; Murphy Hall renovation, $422,000; Administration Building addition, $910,000; Biology Field Station, $73,000; Hodgin Hall renovation, $400,000; Home Management House renovation, $31,000; All-Weather Tennis Courts, $77,000; Farm Superintendent's Building, $36,500; Farm Improvements, $80,000; Hines Hall renovation and expansion, $380,000; Addition to former Kent Court for Adult Education and Community Services, $195,000; Air conditioning of six buildings, $866,000.

The budget Commission members were scheduled to make no decisions on the requests presented Thursday.

All budget requests will be taken into consideration by the commission which will make its recommendations to the 1973 General Assembly.
