

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

SERVED UNDER FIVE PRESIDENTS

CLYDE DEHUGULEY, BELOVED A&T TEACHER PASSES

CLYDE DEHUGULEY

Clyde DeHuguley, who served in various teaching and administrative capacities at A&T State University under five presidents, died Friday afternoon at L. Richardson Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

DeHuguley, 71, lived at 731 Plott St., and had been retired from A&T since June of 1971.

He was the husband of Mrs. Stephanie Banks DeHuguley and a son of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. W. DeHuguley.

Prior to his retirement, DeHuguley, a fine teacher and home-spun philosopher, had become somewhat of a legend to countless A&T graduates and former students.

Over the years, he taught industrial arts, mechanical subjects, and ornamental leathercraft, and served as superintendent of buildings and grounds, property custodian and chairman of the university's laundry.

DeHuguley helped to initiate A&T's ROTC program and he served as marshal for commencement for 21 consecutive years.

"Mr. DeHuguley was a gentle soul with a special concern and compassion for all humanity," said Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, chancellor of A&T. "The entire A&T community is saddened to learn of his untimely passing. His long and devoted service to this institution and its thousands of graduates, will be with us for many generations to come."

DeHuguley was a native of Americus, Ga. and a graduate of the famed Tuskegee Institute, where he studied under Booker T. Washington and George Washington Carver.

He taught for two years at the Kentucky State Normal College, then came to A&T in 1924. The campus in Greensboro consisted of three small buildings and 100 students.

DeHuguley attended St. Matthews United Methodist Church for over 40 years. He was a charter member of the Greensboro Men's Club, the Hayes-Taylor YMCA Retired Men's Club and the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Olene Carr, Hampton, Va.; and Mrs. Anita Saunders, Washington, D. C.; and a brother, Toussaint L'Ouverture DeHuguley, Washington, D. C.

A funeral service was held last Monday at 4 p.m. in the St. Matthews United Methodist Church, with the Rev. J. J. Patterson officiating. Burial was in Piedmont Memorial Park with Smith's Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Faculty-Staff Workshop Signals Opening Of Fall Term At A&T

An address by Dr. Elias Blake, a nationally prominent educator from Washington, D. C., will highlight the annual faculty and staff institute at A&T State University Friday.

Blake, president of the Institute for Services to Education, will speak at 9 a.m. at the opening session of the one-day conference in the Crosby Hall theatre.

The theme for this year's conference, the prelude to the opening of the fall semester at A&T, will be "Operation Curriculum Change," according to Dr. Lewis C. Dowdy, the university's chancellor.

Dowdy will present his annual state of the university message during the morning session, and the afternoon session will feature a report on the state's restructured system of higher education by John P. Kennedy, secretary to the Board of Governors.

The session will be concluded by a symposium on several national curriculum workshops attended by A&T faculty member during the current summer.

Dowdy also announced the appointment of 14 new faculty members for the fall term.

These new teachers include Dr. Quiester Craig, professor of business and dean of the School of Business and Economics; Dr. Brian J. Benson, associate professor of English; Dr. Yogeshwar Hari, professor of mechanical engineering and Miss Mary Ann Brewer, assistant professor of medical surgical nursing.

Others are Mrs. Inez Perry, instructor of psychiatric nursing; Mrs. Yvonne G. Spencer, instructor of nursing; Mrs. Ora S. Davis, instructor of maternal-child health nursing; William Albert, assistant professor of safety and driver education; Clarence Harrison, instructor of electrical engineering; Pill Jay Cho, assistant professor of sociology; Miss Charley B. Flint, instructor of sociology; Cecero A. Hughes, instructor of history; Peter V. Meyers, assistant professor of history; and Miss Kay Andrews, assistant catalog librarian and instructor.

Spartanburg Nursing Home Officials Convicted of Medicare Fraud

Mary E. Shelnut and Florence S. Waddell, administrators of Rest Haven Medicare Center Spartanburg, S. C., were convicted August 8, 1972, in Federal Court of conspiring to defraud the Medicare Program. Federal Court Judge Hemphill sentenced the two nursing home operators to suspended sentences of 4 years each (subject to probation) and a fine of $5,000 each. The parent corporation, Southern Retirement Association, Inc., was fined $10,000. In Atlanta, Ga., James W. Murray, Regional Commissioner for the Social Security Administration, stated that this is the first conviction of this nature in the nation under the Medicare Program.
