Get the Garden Ready

A good garden is half the battle for the average family and when it is properly managed it will almost eliminate the necessity of buying groceries.

There are families in the county who do not realize the value of a good garden and since the shortage of labor and money has been prevalent, have been forced to call on the Red Cross fund for support.

There is positively no excuse for any family not having a garden and making enough to store away for the winter as well as a summer's supply of vegetables.

Every man or woman who knows of a family in their neighborhood who does not have a garden should have enough interest in that family to help them get a place to make a good garden this year. It would not only give the family without the garden an opportunity to make their own support, but would help check the demand on the relief funds and the necessity of the neighbors helping along this particular line.

It behooves every one just now to use the tactics of the squirrel who lays away his winter supply while it is to be gotten, so that when winter winds blow, the cellar will have an abundant supply.

Now is the time to get the garden ready and sufficient fertilizer can be gotten for use in that garden.

Instead of encouraging a dole fund in the county, we should use every effort to have those who really need help be self-supporting in so far as possible, then add the necessary things when it is impossible for them to get it otherwise. To do this we must help our neighbor to have a chance to make something for himself and making a good garden will prove one of the most essential things we can do.

Advise Now Or Never

There appears to be quite a good deal of dissension among the people of the county about the use of the old walls of the court house in the construction of the new. This feeling has been shown since the first advise by the architect who was hired and paid $450.00, to furnish the plans and advise as to the strength and durability of the old walls.

A petition was circulated in Sparta last Monday and practically every one who was asked to sign it, against the use of the walls, was ready and willing. This naturally was brought to the attention of the Board of Commissioners and it is their desire to please the people in this particular respect, however it is a part of the contract with the county and the architect that if any part of the plans are not complied with, then all responsibility ceases so far as the architect is concerned.

If the walls from the foundation are built, it will cost the county approximately $1,000 more, but the attitude of those who have expressed their feelings is that it probably would pay.

Every interested taxpayer should make a special effort to assist the Commissioners in this matter in doing the things that would be best and most satisfactory with the least expense and it is suggested that they see the commissioners this week and give their ideas, representing as many of the taxpayers as possible.

It is evident that the Board is ready to do the best and the cheapest thing possible and that is all the more reason why everyone should take enough interest to advise them for the best interest of the public.

The time for this advice is drawing to a close and if a change in the plans is to be made it must be done immediately or the original plans will be carried out as set out by the architect.

Sparta High School To Stage Music Recital

On Friday evening, April 14, at 8:00 o'clock, the music class of the Sparta high school will give their annual recital. A most unique program has been arranged featuring Mother Goose and her universal troupe of players. Mary Cecil Higgins plays the role of Mother Goose while Charles Dean Choate as Simple Simon, the jolly pie-man, serves as announcer.

This unusual program is further enhanced by selections played by the Toy Band which has recently been organized.

The public is cordially invited to attend the program. There will be no admission charge.

Agricultural Notes

Cattle Scab and Method of Control And Eradication

The cattle scab is commonly known as 'scab,' 'mange,' or 'itch.' Cattle scab is a contagious skin disease affecting cattle of all classes and ages. The greatest injury occurs among cattle of weak vitality. The scab causes shrinkage in weight, unthriftiness, functional disturbance, low vitality, and increased death rate, all results in serious financial loss.

In the western part of the U. S. where cattle graze on the open ranges, the losses caused by common scab have been a serious drawback to the industry, but through the co-operative work of the Bureau of Animal Industry and officials of the state concerned, the disease has been greatly reduced and brought under control, where it occurred very frequently.

Causes of Common Scab
The psoroptic mites which cause common scab live in groups or colonies on the surface of the skin, and the lesions caused by them spread in all directions from the spot first affected. The mites are small yellow or white colored parasites, known technically as psoroptes equi bovis or more often as psoroptes communis bovis. The female when full grown measures 1-40 of an inch and the male about 1-50 inch in length. They are visible to the naked eye. The general form of the body is oval or egg shaped and the tapering head is longer than broad. These mites have four pairs of legs all of which extend beyond the margin of the body.

The entire life cycle is passed on the body of the host animal. Each female may deposit from 15 to 24 eggs, which hatch after 3 or 4 days incubation. The young mites reach maturity, mate and the female deposits eggs in from 10 to 12 days.

Symptoms of Common Scab
The mites which cause common scab may attack any part of the body covered thick with hair, but first lesions usually occur on the withers, on top of neck just in front of withers or around root of tail. From these points it spreads over the entire body unless it is checked.

Contagiousness of Common Scab
The common cattle scab is not transmissible to other species of animals. It is contagious to all classes of cattle and is transmitted by direct contact with animals or objects that are carriers of the mites. The disease spreads more rapidly among closely confined cattle than those on the open range. Visible lesions of scab may develop in from 15 to 45 days exposure, sometimes it may be for a longer period.

Treatment of Common Scab
Cattle scab can be eradicated by dipping, or spraying, but dipping is the better method of treatment. Lime sulphur dips, nicotine dips and crude petroleum dips are efficient. It is advisable to clean and disinfect all infected sheds, barns and yards before using them after cattle have been treated. Some external applications which will kill the parasites without injury to the animal. The dipping commonly used and permitted by the Bureau of Animal Industry for use in the official dipping of cattle are lime sulphur and nicotine solution.

Two dippings from 10 to 14 days apart in one of the dips can usually be depended upon to cure cases of common scab. Internal remedies, such as sulphur and salt, etc., have not proven successful and should not be depended upon.

The FAMILY DOCTOR

(By John Joseph Gaines, M. D.)

"PLEURISY"

Here is a disease of the winter months, Pleurisy, usually resulting from exposure to violent cold. It should not be mistaken for pneumonia, so, you better have the doctor and be sure you are right.

Pleurisy announces itself by PAIN. Not necessarily much fever, unless it begins with a pronounced chill. Remember—pleurisy is outside of the lung; pneumonia inside. The pleura is a tough, smooth membrane that lines the chest-wall—and also covers the body of the lung. If the membrane is normal, it will glide over its neighboring surfaces without sensation; inflamed, it at once becomes very painful. A cough, if any, is excruciating—it hurts to take a full breath—hurts at the point inflamed. If the spot remains sore long enough adhesions may form, which starts a very chronic condition, hard to cure.

I have many times taken out from three to twelve pints of dropsical fluid from an old case of neglected pleurisy—"pleurisy with effusion." It should never be permitted to get that far.

Your duty when attacked is, to go to bed, or, at least stay in the house where the air is dry and warm. Get up a sweat as quickly as possible. See that the bowel is "open". Get the blood to the surface and keep it there—it is possible only in warm atmosphere. Pneumonia may be mistaken for pleurisy—a dangerous mistake. See your doctor, and take no chances. Simple pleurisy is not dangerous if promptly attended to; pneumonia may be deadly if neglected.

The real name of pleurisy is "pleuritis." But I am inclined to use plain, understandable language for my readers. I hope this short sketch concerning a common complaint, may do good somewhere.

PRECAUTIONS NEEDED

In winter weather I see many people, old and young, making hurried little trips without sufficient protection against cold. A housewife will drop her kitchen things, and rush down to the bakery for something needed for dinner; she hasn't time to put on a wrap—and, it's only a short space—three blocks. So she whizzes out bareheaded, and with short sleeves used for farm house-wear. She may have been perspiring just the least bit—but that's nothing; she has done the same thing a thousand times.

But—she encounters a keen north-east wind—just a little damp as she turns the corner back; it produces a shiver up and down the spine. She hurries in with her purchase—does not perspire any more that day. The deed has been done.

At bedtime she notices a slight sore throat, with a tickling short, dry cough. Unless she sets in to work to break it up, she may have it hang on for a week! All because of that hasty trip to the bakery, without proper protection.

This letter is to tell you some little things worth while. You must throw on a wrap when going out into sharp cold, no matter how short the trip contemplated. This applies to men as well as to women and children. Keep the surface of the body warm—that's the law of safety.

I know we used to "tear around" with immunity, but we can't do it
