SPRING MESSENGER

By Ethelyn Richardson
You're here again, almost before
The snow has melted from our door;

We all know your purpose here,
Know that you, you lovely thing
Are just a Messenger of Spring.
Almost every where I look

In every little sheltered nook,
I see you looking up at me
Like little stars, your faces shine
Pluffy yellow Dandelion.

Agriculture Boys Enter District Contest

Johnson Sanders of the junior class of Sparta high school won first place in the elementary speaking contest sponsored by the local chapter of the Young Tar Heel Farmers with Lyle Smith, of the sophomore class winning second place. Mr. Sanders on Thursday, April 20, goes to Harmony, N. C., to represent the school in the district elimination contest to be held at eight o'clock. The material to be held in these speeches is collected and co-ordinated by the speakers themselves. The subjects selected are those which are being discussed by groups of progressive farmers wherever they get together.

Another item of interest is the participation of this school in the district livestock judging contest to be held at the Win-Mock Farm, at Mocksville, N. C., Saturday, April 22, at 10:30 a. m. Elimination for the latter was held at Mr. Eugene Transou's farm Wednesday afternoon of this week. Our representatives in the district are to be Herman Hudson and Kemp Dnncan.

The FAMILY DOCTOR

(By John Joseph Gaines, M. D.)

GALL-STONES

If you are past middle, fat, "tubby" and—sedentary, you are a likely candidate for gall-stones, and especially if constipated and neglectful of diet, bowels and exercise. Then, if you eat too much.

I don't see as many gall-stone cases as I used to—not at all; people are becoming educated.

Not all gall stones announce themselves by the severe pain of passing through the bile-duct; I once did an autopsy on an 80-year-old patient—a woman—who had carried over 70 large stones in the gall bladder for years without knowing she had them.

These concretions are caused by long-retained bile in the gall-bladder; they form somewhat like sugar forms in the bottom of the syrup-pitcher that is little used. Prevention means—to keep the bile moving; exercise helps to do this. A plain, nutritious diet, and temperance in eating is another aid. Plenty of green vegetables, the "leafy" sorts are of use in the diet.—Lettuce, spinach, dandelion greens, well-prepared cabbage, colslow, and such.

I am partial to the coarser breads at least once daily. People have told me sweet milk and eggs "make them bilious." I think they are mistaken; the term biliousness is so old it has whiskers—like all pious old frauds, it means always something else.

Best remedy for threat of gall-stones, Phosphate of Soda—I mean best family remedy; it is harmless. Should be taken every morning before breakfast, enough to keep the bowels moving comfortably. A simple, well-tried remedy is safer in the household than a car-load of exploited "specifics" that spell quackery in big letters.

The surgery of the gall-bladder is another matter. Your family doctor is your best friend . . . ask him.

After reading half a column of instructions on how to pronounce "Jehol," we've decided to call it "Jehol"—Atlanta Journal.

Man was just as intelligent 10,000 years ago as he is now, declares a learned professor, damning our prehistoric ancestors, with vain praise.—Boston Herald.
