Farm Notes

tatoes and Northern grown seed. The yield from our Mountain grown seed was 231 1-2 bushels per acre, Maine grown seed 230 bushels per acre, and Nebraska grown seed 238 bushels per acre. Our seed compared favorably with all the Northern grown seed, and the farmers down there were of the opinion that our seed were just as good, if not better, than the Northern seed.

In the potato growing sections of the eastern part of this state, the farmers have to buy their seed each year, because their home grown seed mature about two weeks later than potatoes grown in a high cool climate. And the earlier they can market their potatoes the better the price they receive. So the farmers in Eastern North Carolina each year buy from 750,000 to a million bushels of Irish Cobbler potatoes for planting their crop. This gives our farmer unlimited possibilities in growing certified seed Irish Cobbler potatoes to supply the Eastern farmers with seed.

On the farm of Mr. Albritten, where the potato meeting was held, there are 400 acres of level land with 25 miles of tile drain under it. On this one farm they plant on an average of 1200 bushels of potatoes each year. The land there is very fertile and two crops are grown on the land each year. They believe in feeding their crops and they use a ton of fertilizer per acre for their potatoes.

The people down there were exceptionally nice to us "Mountain Boomers" and their hospitality was of the finest Southern type.

The following men are growing certified seed Irish potatoes in this county this year; Coy McCan, R. F. Crouse, R. E. Hawthorne, and Vann Miller. Mr. H. R. Niswonger inspected these fields for certification last week. He found no varietal mixtures and very little disease in these fields. R. E. Hawthorne now has the brag field of potatoes. He has had more rain than some of the other growers and his 4 acre field of potatoes on New River certainly would be an eye opener to the most of the farmers of this county.

GOOD OLD DAYS

(Louise Grave in The Chapel Hill Weekly.)

If there are two or three flies in the room the room I grumble; but in the midst of my grumbling, now and then, I am amused by the thought of how pampered I have become. It is not many years around 25, I should say—since flies swarmed in all the houses in Chapel Hill. Window screens were practically unknown. People took the flies for granted as a curse which God had permitted the devil to inflict upon mankind.

A familiar sight in almost every household was a machine that consisted of a shaft upon which revolved in a horizontal plane, a pair of black cloth wings. Each wing was of about the size of a tennis racket. The machine was placed upon the dining table, and you wound it up with a key, as you would a clock, to keep the wings in motion. The idea was that they shooed the flies away. As a matter of fact, they did very little if any good. The flies would buzz about the table, then sit upon the wings and ride, and then buzz about again.

A COMPANY THIRTY YEARS OLD

Last Friday the Ford Motor Company completed 30 years of automobile making.

It is also my fortieth year at the same job. I made my first engine in 1893, and it still runs. This is the engine that won the Selden Patent Suit—which took the motor car out of the exclusive class, and opened the automobile industry to hundreds of manufacturers who started during the last 30 years.

Some of the men who began with me that June day in 1903, are working here yet. All of the principles we laid down then, are still operative; we find that they have great survival value for the future. To date they have produced and sold over 21,000,000 Ford cars.

Although we created the automobile market we have never thought it was good for anyone to monopolize it. We have always believed that before business could be good for one, it must be good for all. Our discoveries and improvements have always been open to other manufacturers without patent restrictions.

Of course, there is one thing we cannot share—everyone must get it for himself—and that is experience. Money could duplicate our buildings and machines, but it cannot duplicate 40 years of experience. And it is experience that makes a motor car.

But the past does not especially concern me; it has all been a preparation for the future. For myself, I feel that I have just been gathering the tools to do something worth while, and that my real task is still ahead.

Great changes are upon the world. False ideas of every kind are vanishing in the general upheaval. Those who built truly on principle will survive—their service will carry over. Business integrity and commodity honor will be fully justified. And newer and better ways of living will appear.

That is the outlook for this young thirty-year old Company of ours.

Henry Ford
