Ford Stock Car Wins Race

Fred Frame, of Los Angeles, Cal., driving a Ford V-8, captured the stock car race run over the Elgin national race course this morning averaging 80.22 miles an hour for the 203 miles. More than 85,000 spectators, favored by ideal racing weather, occupied all vantage points along the eight- and a half-mile right-of-way, the shaded groves, and on the curves.

Frame set a record for the course, beating the mark set in 1920 when Ralph De Palma, driving a high-powered racing car, traveled the then 250 mile race distance at a speed of 79.5 miles an hour. Frame's time for the race this morning was 2 hours 32 minutes and 6 seconds.

A FEDERAL POLICE FORCE AND A DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Considerable sentiment is being aroused for the creation of a Federal Police Force to stamp out crime and racketeering. The grounds offered for the establishment of such a force is the weaknesses evinced by local governments in dealing with modern crime, which has become interstate in its operations the same as legitimate business interests. Only a "federal law enforcement unit that will cover the populous centers, working quietly, thoroughly and relentlessly" will suffice, it is contended.

Many do not deny that some drastic means must be taken to curb criminal activities, but they point out that the proposal to set up a Federal Police Force is decidedly revolutionary. Centralized police power, they claim, is the very power fought in the Constitutional Convention, and hadnot that power been felt in the states the constitution would not have been adopted. If the Federal Government should assume responsibility for wiping out big criminal operations, where would this power end, they ask. Would it not eventually be used to encroach upon the political liberties of the people by crushing freedom of speech and the press in the states?

It is held by some that what is most needed to wipe out crime is a vigorous public press which will constantly attack wrongdoing in all strata of society, so that the people may be aroused to replace those public officials who do not enforce the various state and national laws against crime.

It is declared that federal laws are not now always enforced if the violator is prominent in the political and industrial life of the nation. Hearings before committees of the Senate and House frequently disclose this to be true, it is pointed out. What assurance is there, it is asked, judging from certain laxities of federal enforcement, that the big criminal operators will not be able to escape punishment even if a Federal Police Force is established?

Many who have studied the motive of law violations believe that an aroused public opinion, the creation of social justice in all its implications and the adequate education of both children and adults would do more to wipe out crime than any other means. These processes are rational and salutary in their effects, it is held. The first opens to view the criminal offenses and causes-public officials to act without delay; the second strikes at the cause of much crime; and the last equips the individual to earn his way, while it enables him to contribute to the maintenance of an orderly, decent society.

The establishment of a Department of Education and the appropriation of federal funds to aid the various centers which have little or no means to support education, is believed by many to be more desirable than the creation of a Federal Police Force to strengthen what is termed weak local governments.

THE NEVER-ENDING WAR

The American public has a war to fight every year. The war against the accident menace—in industry the home, on the highways and elsewhere.

This is not an empty parallel. Automobile accidents alone actually cost more lives than war. They create as much suffering. They are even comparable to war in the economic waste they entail.

On a number of fronts this war has been successful. In the industrial field, tremendous progress in accident prevention has been made. The roster of important industries which operate for months at a stretch without a single mishap of importance, is constantly growing. The life and health of workers in every producing field has never been better guarded—because management has been tireless in instilling the doctrine of safety first into its employes.

That is also true of children of school age. Thousands of young lives have been saved through courses on caution and accident prevention.

The great failure has been in the field of the automobile. Most years have seen decisive advances in the number of deaths and injuries over the last. Reductions, the few times they have occurred, have been small. The reckless and inconsiderate driver has scored victory after victory. The result is that our public streets and highways have become places of carnage.

The never-ending war against accident must be fought with increasing vigor if it is to succeed. The dangerous driver is Public Enemy Number 1. He should be given the treatment he deserves.
