BLUEDEVILS GET READY FOR FIRST '33 GRID CLASH

DURHAM, N. C., SEPT. 26—Coach Wallace Wade is putting the finishing touches on his Duke University Blue Devils preparatory to opening their 1933 schedule with V. M. I. in Greensboro Saturday night, September 30.

The backfield problems that faced the Duke mentor when practice started—finding a signal caller and a block ing back—have been about worked out and the combination he is running in the Duke camp now will be given their first trial under fire against the Flying Cadets from Virginia.

That quarter is composed of Horace (Horse) Hendrickson as quarterback, Nick Lancy and Corky Cornelius, halfbacks, and Bob Cox, fullback. All earned their letters last year but only Lancy was a regular during the 1932 campaign.

In the line Harry Rossiter, star triple-threat end, Rom Rogers and Earle Wentz, all veterans, have been alternating at the ends; the great Freddie Crawford and Al Means, tackles; Captain Carl Shock and Jack Dunlap, guards; and E. B. Dunlap, center.

Duke's first trio of games are as hard as any team in the south faces. After the opener with V. M. I. the Devils play on successive Saturdays in Duke stadium the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest and Tennessee's powerful Vols.

Tennessee is slated to be one of the best teams in the country this year and have already been picked by most of the coaches to win the South-eastern conference title. It will probably be the biggest obstacle on Duke's 1933 card.

Greensboro officials who are putting on the Duke-V. M. I. game are making many plans for a colorful contest. A mammoth parade of college students is planned for the night of the game, marching through town to the stadium and special trains are going to be run from various points in Virginia to the contest, the first Southern conference game of the season and the first since the split in the ranks last December.

Mrs. Ellen Parks is spending a few days in Winston-Salem.

BIRDS OF ALLEGHANY CO. THE REDSTART (By Claude J. Smith.)

I believe the warblers are the most interesting family of birds and the redstart is one of the most beautiful of the family. The male has the head, neck, breast, and back glossy black, with lower breasts and underparts white. The sides of body, wing linings, and part of tail feathers bronze red. End of tail feathers are black. The female is olive brown where her mate is black, and yellow where he is orange-red. They are constantly on the alert, and are very numerous in the autumn migration. On September 11, I saw a large flock of over 200 warblers among which were over 80 redstarts. It certainly was a sight to see those warblers fitting thru the trees, catching insects. These birds are found in woods and bushes near woods. Like all warblers, they are never still. I first see these birds in April, and do not see them in the fall after about mid-October. They nest near my home, and have a beautiful short song. I found my first nest this year on June 5, in a dogwood sapling about 10 feet from the ground. It was carefully constructed of moss, plant fibres, horsehair, and grasses, and contained four small white eggs, speckled with brown and lilac. Warblers are strictly a new world family and are strongly unknown to those who do not seek their acquaintance at proper seasons.
