

CROSSNORE SCHOOL ASKS GIFTS OF OLD CLOTHING

Mountain Institution Renders Aid To Poor Students.

New lives for old clothes! Here at Crossnore, out of old clothing, the "white elephant" of many a family, we build new lives, new hopes, new possibilities for the future of the mountains.

Crossnore School came into being, and derives much of its support, literally from the Ragman's Pack. Old clothing, household articles, everything used by human beings, all are sent to and sold in our sales room to the people of these highlands, at prices within the range of even their lean pocketbooks.

Crossnore School is a school with a difference. It is a Christian, non-denominational institution founded by and for the mountain people. The central units are the State supported and controlled public school, and the boarding facilities for those of the children who are unable to attend as day students. Connected with this latter are the school farm, the weaving rooms, the community work, and all the means that are found to help the students earn part or all of their expenses.

The State cares for the scholastic education, but the school must ask its friends to lend their support for the rest. We need money, much of it, for the daily use of coal and food, for help others than the few the State Vocational Bureau can send, for the support of dormitories, the hospital and the community work. We need money for scholarships in order that needy students can stay in school, and to support little children not yet old enough to earn any of their way. Many of our friends do their bit by sending us a dollar a year.

But even where a money gift is impossible, there are old clothing and home furnishings which in the Miracle Melting Pot of our Sales Room can become the money we need so much. Send us the outgrown, the out-of-style or season clothing; send us anything but old text books. There is a market for it here. We can sell at least half as much again as we ever receive, little money as there is here in the mountains. Search your attics, closets, drawers. Ask your friends, and their friends. Have your club, your church, your Sunday School get up bundles and boxes and send them to Crossnore School. What better return could there be on any investment than new life, higher education and swifter progress for mankind?

Since the lean hard years set in, it has been hard for anyone to earn a living and support his own loved ones, let alone contribute to the life and happiness of others. But here at Crossnore is a work that can be helped by you with little cost to yourself. We know that you are regularly asked to contribute something to help others. We know too how little there is to spare in any home today. But because our need is so great we dare to ask.

New lives for old clothes! Help us to keep lighted the Aladdin's Lamp of hope and ambition here in the Highlands. Help us to help these genuine Americans to help themselves, not by giving them things, but by showing them the way to get them for themselves.

The time is NOW to protect the rights of our children and advance civilizations through them.

To those who have vision and understanding, a great opportunity is afforded to make a contribution to education by participating in the seven-day program during Education Week.

At considerable time and expense the National Educational Association has prepared the following special helps in the form of packets of printed material:

Packet for churches—Contains posters, articles, addresses and special suggestions. Local teacher groups will wish to present this packet to ministers for Sunday observances. (50c).

The topics suggested for the day-by-day program are as follows:

American Education Week has been jointly sponsored by the National Education Association, the American Legion and the U. S. Office of Education for twelve successive years. It is hoped this year to interpret the schools to 10,000,000 homes through literature, visit to schools and programs.

Let every citizen do his duty by America's bulwark of liberty.

RARE SEA BIRD CAPTURED

IN THIS COUNTY

(By Claude J. Smith.)

About October 19, 1933, Carl Irwin proprietor of Twin Oaks Motor Company, captured a bird in a pond just across the highway from his home. The bird seemed to be crippled in some way, so Mr. Irwin took it to his house, and kept it a few days. He said that when placed in the kitchen sink it would swim well. After keeping it a few days he killed it, and, not wishing to throw it away had it mounted by Roy Crouse, of Sparta. It was then placed in Twin Oaks cafe for observation, and, if possible, for identification. Numerous persons, including traveling salesman, saw the bird, but were at a loss as to its identity. On October 17, I learned of the "bird without a name," and, as I was returning from Sparta, stopped to see it, and see if I could name it. I could not name it on sight, so I made careful and complete notes as to color, size, shape, and other characteristics. When I returned home I identified it with the able help of Reed's "Guide of Water Birds East of the Rockies," as a Sooty Shearwater, a bird found on the North Atlantic coast in summer, whose nesting and winter range is not given, and possibly not definitely known. The bird is about 16 inches long, sooty grayish, black all over with the underwing coverts whitish. The bill and feet are black; the feet being webbed, like those of a duck. The form of the bird is rather slender, and it has long, slender wings. The bill, which is black, is largest at the tip than at the base. These birds are rarely ever seen unless on the water, when they take their food, which is composed of oily refuse. This bird has never before been recorded in the State, as I learn, and possibly not many times in the United States. The identification of the bird brings Alleghany's total to 199 species, all seen by the writer.

Carolina-Ga. Tech In Great Home-Coming Battle

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 21—Carolina and Georgia Tech eleventh will clash here in Kenan Stadium Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in one of the biggest games of the State this season and the outstanding feature of the big Homecoming Day program which is being arranged for Carolina alumni.

One of the year's largest crowds is predicted. For the Golden Tornado is being likened to Tech's national championship team of 1928 since its victory over Auburn. And Carolina, which is out to gain revenge for last year's loss, is expected to give the "Ramblin' Wreck" a great battle after the manner of the tie games played by the two teams in 1930 and 1931.

Local people and merchants are joining with students and alumni in extensive preparations for a gala celebration. The downtown section, the main buildings on the campus, and the fraternities, which will hold open house this week-end, will be decorated in gay trimmings. Extra features will include a great parade and pep meeting Friday night, a surprise program by the Band and Cheerios at the game, and two dances Friday and Saturday nights.

Georgia Tech alumni in this section have also made this their Homecoming game. A host of them are expected to come back for the special luncheon and extra festivities and for the big game at which the Tech routers will be seated together in a special section.

Reduction in Dairy Cattle Proposed

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 7—A dairy cattle reduction campaign, similar to that carried on by the federal government for hogs, cotton and wheat, has been suggested to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace by Dr. Lewis C. Crab, chief veterinarian of the Texas Livestock Sanitary Commission.

Crab proposes slaughter, or disposal in some manner, of all diseased dairy cattle and all which do not give sufficient milk to return a profit in normal times.

He suggested in his plan, which he forwarded to Secretary Wallace, that thorough test be carried on throughout the United States of the health of cattle. This test, he suggested, could be made by the country's numerous agricultural agencies at a small cost.

Such a test, he said, would show that there are approximately 5,000,000 dairy cows in the United States which should be eliminated because of disease, or due to their unprofitableness as milk producers.

He also advocated a processing tax on dairy products, similar to that placed on wheat and cotton, to pay farmers for disposing of the diseased or poor quality cattle.

The campaign against diseased cattle, aside from its economic benefits, would greatly aid in reducing tuberculosis, Crab said, while the elimination of unprofitable cattle from a herd would aid every farmer.

BLUE EAGLE IS UNCLE SAM'S BIRD.

When the call was made for volunteers to sign up under the Blue Eagle banner there were many who enrolled evidently without giving due thought to the significance of their act. Whether they willingly or anxiously signed or not, they did so very readily, and immediately they were given free of charge bright emblems to be used in their places of business.

Those emblems are valuable. They are the best advertisements business can have. In fact, many merchants have seemingly placed higher estimate upon them than upon newspaper advertising, which is perfectly all right, the Blue Eagles being in the same army with newspapers—fighting for the rights of others.

But it was no more than might have been expected that there would be some who would sign the agreements, secure the emblems and use them to their advantage without compliance with the terms. It is to this class that President Roosevelt now addresses the warning that he will call for a fine of $500 and six months imprisonment for violation of the Blue Eagle agreement.

It is a pity that this warning from the President should be necessary. Why is it that some people will be so selfish that they will try to take advantage of a noble movement on the part of the great majority of the people of the United States—to make such use of the Blue Eagle as to further their own interests without giving in return their wholehearted support? The answer is that some people will put self first and above all other things, even disregard a sacred obligation.

Warning was given in the beginning by General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, not to "trifle with that bird." Wise people heeded the warning. Others were wise enough to understand why they should comply with the terms were so selfish that they allowed their greed to get the better of their judgment. Now it is time for checking up, and all who have practiced selfishness had better get right with the Eagle.

It is hoped that no one will be found violating the agreement. What we would like to see is a check-up with a total of one hundred per cent compliance with Blue Eagle rules.—Harnett County News.

Public Opinion

ALCOHOL?—YES OR NO

Alcohol is a poison. It is poisonous under any law—legal or illegal. Opponents of the 18th Amendment may change the law, governing the relation of alcohol to the government, but they cannot change the nature of alcohol. It will still remain protoplasmic poison. It can not ever be classed as a food. Its effect upon cells and tissues will still be narcotic, anaesthetic, and depressing. It will render its user more susceptible to disease. It will interfere with their recovery when ill and one's expectation of long life at all times. Excessive use of alcohol will produce abnormal nervous control of the mind and body. It destroys the judgment and reason and places man on the level with animal kingdom. Alcohol is still capable of producing heart trouble. It can distort the judgment and inflame the passion as no other drug does.

No user of alcohol can hope to be a good parent, athlete, car driver, locomotive engineer or aeroplane pilot. Repeal can never make a boy or girl a better scholar or finer Christian—so why vote for repeal?

Ford V-8's Win European Race On Mountain Roads

"Six Ford V-8 cars piloted by Dutch drivers triumphed conclusively over five European and two other American entrants in the fifth annual running of the grueling 5-day International Alpine Trial over 1,165 miles of Swiss, Italian and French mountain roads, according to official reports of the race just received here.

Three of the winning Fords driven by a Dutch team captained by Dr. J. J. Sprengren van Eyck captured the coveted Coupe des Alpes, while the three other Fords won the first three places in the individual competition for the Coupe des Glaciers. The first two tied for first place with the best score of any of the dozens of contestants in the five classes competing.

The annual Alpine contest is probably the most severe test of motor car endurance and performance conducted in Europe. It is open only to stock cars as sold to the public. Its route from Merano, via St. Moritz, Turin, and Grenoble to Nice, includes the ascent and descent of 12 major passes with steep winding roads, scores of dangerous "hair-pin" turns and a never-ending variety of road surfaces which test alike the stamina of the cars and the skill of the drivers.

Most difficult of all the passes is the Stelvio, in the Ortler Alps between Italy and Switzerland. It rises to 9,150 feet above sea level. The highway leading to it is the highest automobile road in the world. In the course of the 11-mile climb from the valley, the drivers were forced to negotiate 52 "hair-pin" bends before reaching the snow-capped top of the mountain.

The Ford cars and other competitors in the principal class were required to make the ascent of this difficult pass at an average of 28 miles an hour. Many were forced to stop along the way to replenish the water in their violently steaming radiators but the Ford cars came up the pass in formation without a halt and continued their journey without adding water.

At the final inspection of the competing cars at the finish in Nice where penalties were imposed for faults in condition, the Ford cars were passed without penalty and the drivers complimented by the judges upon the condition of the cars, both mechanically and in appearance.
