GREATER REDPOLLO AND HORNED LARK SEEN IN COUNTY

(By Claude Smith.) Alleghany's bird population now numbers 201, with the identification of the Greater Redpoll and Horned Lark.

On November 4, a small flock of 12 strange birds were seen on a hill-top near W. R. Jones' home; these birds proved to be Greater Redpolls. This bird breeds in the Arctic Regions and comes to the United States only casually. It usually ventures no farther south than the northern states. The bird is grayish brown, with a crimson swash on head, neck, and lower back, and is 5 1/2 inches long. These birds have habits similar to the sparrows.

On November 8, 1933, near Scottville, as I was walking thru a pasture field, a large flock of birds flew up. I was quite near them, and noted the color, manner of flight, and other marked characteristics. Before I had completely traversed the field, three more flocks of the same bird arose. As near as I could estimate the number there were 325 in all. I identified these birds as Horned Larks. These birds make their summer home in Greenland and Labrador, and in winter great flocks come down the Atlantic seaboard and scatter out in smaller bands as far south as North Carolina. Their song is not heard only in the far north. This bird is pinkish gray and dull brown in plumage, has white outer tail feathers, a few erect feathers on the head, (giving it its name), and is 7 3/4 inches long. I have never heard of either of these birds being seen in N. C., but they probably have been.

Notice—I will make round trips to Winston-Salem every Thursday. Leave your order for hauling at Alleghany Motor Sales, Wayne Hoppers.

Secretary Ickes Stresses Need For Universal Education

will deny that the value of the people to the nation is vastly greater than it was a century ago. This increased value is due to the fact that they have become more universally intelligent as the result of education. Of the three factors in the production of material wealth, namely, natural resources, native ability of the people and education, education is the only one that varies to any considerable extent. And it should be borne in mind that education can vary in either direction. If our production and accumulation of material wealth is greater in the degree that our education is more universal and of higher quality it goes without saying that with a falling off in education our material prosperity would diminish correspondingly.

We accumulate wealth; we can pass on to each succeeding generation tangible property in any form. We can even to some extent transmit native ability. But we cannot bequeath an education to our children. The most we can do is to provide them with the means for an education. Every babe that is born into the world is as ignorant as its most remote ancestor. It can neither write nor read. It has only rudimentary mental processes. It merely has reactions and responses to external stimuli. If abandoned to its own fate on an uninhabited island, if it survived at all, it would grow up to be a totally illiterate man and an ignorant one, except as it might learn certain facts of life from its environment and from its experience. Since it is necessary to recreate in each generation those processes of education which the preceding generation enjoyed, we must continue to provide schools and teachers and all the essential tools that go to furnish and equip the mind.

We have been made sadly aware during these last few years of the necessity of economy. With our private incomes sharply diminished, with our means of livelihood cut off, with less pay forthcoming for the same amount of work, we have had to pinch and scrimp to make both ends meet. If this condition has been true in our private affairs, it has also been true as to those common enterprises which we maintain by the taxes that we pay to government. Our schools have suffered along with everything else. Hundreds of thousands of children are either being denied educational opportunities entirely or they are able to attend school only on a part-time basis. Thousands of schools have been closed. Equipment has been deteriorating and replacements of essential tools for education have been lacking.

I do not deny that of necessity some economies must be made in our schools. But we are going too far in that direction. Our schools ought to be the last to feel the pinch of economy, just as they ought first to experience the return of prosperity. Undoubtedly the educational tree needs some pruning. There may be some dead and decayed branches that ought to be cut off. But if such pruning is necessary it should be done scientifically, by experts. It serves no good purpose of economy and it is immensely damaging to our educational system to slash into a budget regardless of whether we are cutting into a vital spot or not.

Even in these days of tremendously pressing problems, to my mind the most important question of all is, what are we going to do about our schools? That education should be universal goes without saying. By education I mean more than the three R's. I believe that every child should be given all the education that he can reasonably absorb. This does not mean that all children should spend an equal number of years in school or that all should take the same courses. It means that everyone in order to have the best chance possible before happy and full life should have every bit of education that he is capable of receiving and of using to advantage.

A Year for Real Thanks

If there ever was a year when we should utter devout thanksgivings. It is this year when we are emerging from the shadow of the valley of depression, and it looks as if everyone will soon have a job again, and everyone will therefore eat. And, speaking of eating, there is no better way to celebrate Thanksgiving than with a bang-up dinner that will make you feel fit to pop.

Whatever have been your experiences since that fatal fall of 1929 which seemed also the fall of everything else, this is one day in the year when everyone can devote his or her whole time to eating, so we are going to suggest a dinner to fit the occasion. Never mind the decorations this year, if you're still short of funds, but put all your money into food.

He should have this not only for his own sake but for the good of the whole. The intelligence of a nation is the sum of the intelligence of all of its citizens. Intelligence is the product of education and education is the greatest national asset that we have. No nation in these times can hope to survive, to say nothing of progressing in the arts and the sciences, in commerce, in trade, or in industry, unless it is composed of a well educated citizenry. Least of all can a democracy, depending, as it must depend, upon an informed public opinion for the selection of its leaders and the framing of its laws hope long to endure unless it consists of a highly and universally educated electorate. The individual American must be educated not only that he may be able to enjoy a happier and fuller life; he must be educated in order

And here are the recipes for the dishes in this menu with which you may not be familiar: Fruit Cocktail in Orange (or Apple) Cases: Cut one banana in cubes, and put it together with the drained contents of one No. 2 can of grapefruit and of one 1-pound can of sliced peaches in eight orange cases, having the peaches swirled around on the top. To make the orange cases, four oranges are required. Remove all the pulp from the cases, and keep them in ice water until needed. Hallowed out red or yellow apples can be used instead. After the fruit is arranged, pour over the chilled syrups from the cans of grapefruit and peaches, mixed with one tablespoon of fresh lime juice and one tablespoon of honey. Serves eight.

Decorative and Delicious Cream of Carrot Soup: Make a white sauce of four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, three cups milk and two cups of strained home-made or canned chicken broth. Press three cups of sliced carrots, or the contents of two 8-ounce cans of diced carrots, through a sieve, and add with their liquor. Add one-half cup cream, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve hot in cups, and on top of each one float a small round cracker on which is placed a rosette of whipped cream dusted with paprika. Serves eight.

Pumpkin and Apple Layer Pie: Mix together one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, three-fourths teaspoon ginger and one-half teaspoon salt. Add to one cup of home-cooked or canned pumpkin. Add two well-beaten eggs and one cup scalded milk. Pour into a pie tin lined with pie paste, bake at 450 degrees for ten minutes and then lower the heat to 325 degrees until set, or until a knife, inserted, comes out clean. Cool. Meanwhile soften one cup of one-half teaspoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water. Dissolve over hot water and add to one and one-half cups home-cooked or canned apple sauce, with three tablespoons orange marmalade and a few grains of cinnamon. Chill. When it begins to set spread over the pumpkin pie and chill again. Cover with whipped cream. Serves eight.

An Extra Dessert And here's an extra dessert to be served where cider can be obtained. It is cool and sweet and satisfying, and takes very little trouble to make. Cider Frappé: Boil one-half cup sugar and one-fourth cup water in a syrup. Soften one teaspoon gelatin in a little cider, and dissolve in the hot syrup. Cool, add two tablespoons lemon juice and three cups cider, and freeze to a stiff mush. If frozen in refrigerator trays, stir several times or beat with Dover beater. Serves eight.
