A letter From Idaho

Twin Falls, Idaho Jan. 2, 1934

To the Editor: I live two and a half miles north-west of Twin Falls, where we have resided for the past eleven years. It is my belief that we can raise as good crops here as they can anywhere. This state has irrigated land and therefore it raises many potatoes, sugar-beets, beans, corn, wheat, hay clover seed and etc. It is also noted for its livestock.

Of course the depression is here as well as elsewhere and therefore the prices of products are low.

We are having wonderful weather for January. We have not had but about two inches of snow this winter and a little rain

We have a large high school and Business College besides four grade schools. There are buses to take the children to school. There are other Colleges in Idaho with honorable mention.

We have well improved roads which aid in transportation.

I have read in the paper where great improvements have been made back there since I left, and which I hope will keep on. It has been Twenty three years since I left Carolina. I have made two trips back and I hope I may make some more.

I am sure that if any of you came to Idaho you would not be disappointed. If any of you should happen to make a trip out here I would enjoy very much to have you come to visit me.

I will close by thanking the Editor for giving me the privilege of writing this letter.

Very Sincerely Yours, Mrs. Beatrice Joines Estep

Better Breakfasts

HAVE you ever heard a man tell elaborately and at great length just exactly what he has for breakfast every morning? Most of us have, and many of us have wondered why he didn't wreat up his appetite and follow the practices of modern dietetics by varying his first meal now and then.

In case your husband is not one of the men who wants his breakfast as unchanging as the inviolable laws of the Medes and the Persians, here's a suggestion for something to serve him in the morning that he'll be sure to appreciate.

This menu includes desirable fruits with its apples and lemon, and the grilled sweetbreads will prove a welcome variation to his usual breakfast.

- Cider Apples Grilled Sweetbreads with Lemon Butter Toasted Rolls Coffee
And here's the way to make Older Apples: Core six baking apples, and pare them half way down. Set them in a baking dish. Cut the apricots from an 8-ounce can in small pieces, and stuff in holes. Spread three-fourths cup brown sugar over tops of apples, and put half a tablespoon butter on top of each. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Add one cup elder to the apricot syrup, heat and pour around apples, then bake in a 350 degree oven until tender -asting several times. Cool. Serve with the cider syrup poured over and with cream also if desired. Serves six.
