From Times Washington Bureau

MAY BUY SURPLUS LAND

Having paid out something like a small fortune in its land-rental policy the A. A. A. is now determined to get away from renting farm lands and moving toward the purchase of submarginal acres.

Although two million acres have been purchased this is hardly a beginning in the retirement of 50,000,000 acres, deemed necessary to put agriculture on a sound basis. Moreover, if only the poorer types of land are acquired it will probably be necessary to retire at least one hundred million acres.

It is reported that efforts will be made to divide the agricultural areas into sections, within which local authorities will be able to cooperate effectively in bringing about adjustments that will encourage the best utilization of the farmer's resources.

Land taken out of cultivation will be converted into parks, forests and wild-fire refuges. Rural rehabilitation plans will be linked with the program designed to provide the maximum farm income over a period of years.

FOOD PRICES RISING

Rising food prices, it is said, are causing complaint on the part of consumers and concern lest American housewives turn against the crop control programs. Certainly, food prices have gone upward as farm commodities have moved toward the sought-after parity.

Just exactly where prices stand is hard to determine although the evidence indicates that there has been a pronounced advance since the spring of 1933, when the official index of prices for farm commodities stood at 68 in terms of the 1909-14 average. Latest index is 107, which does not mean parity because other prices have also gone up although 85 per cent of parity is considered attained.

WHAT ABOUT "PARITY"

Of course, all credit does not belong to any one measure. Prices naturally moved upward from "panic" level. There has been an increased demand because of a gain in industrial purchasing power and the shortage of crops has had a big part in the accomplishment.

On the other side of the picture one should realize that parity does not mean the end of problems, which seem to rise from new conditions. These include increased foreign competition in world markets, the limitation of the "right" to plant certain crops, like cotton, to those who have grown it in the past and the danger that farmers, once accustomed to the "bounty" system will not be willing to see it abandoned.

CROP CONTROL CONTINUES

The law creating the AAA remains in force until the President "finds and proclaims that the national economic emergency in relation to agriculture has been ended." The policy of Congress is declared to be "to establish and maintain" a balance between supply and demand of basic farm commodities so that these products will buy as much in terms of industrial goods, as they bought during the pre-war period, 1909-14.

The imposition of processing taxes is authorized to yield sums to make up the difference between these figures and the abandonment of such levies is contemplated when the goal has been attained.

Already there is talk of abandoning control over some products, with the elimination of rental and benefit payments, which would mean the end of reduction of crops, since few people believe that farmers would restrict acreage without receiving compensation in this form.

If control is thus abandoned one may expect increased production, with new surpluses created. Thus it will only be a question of how long before some control methods may be relaxed.

It should be added, however, that there is no indication that control of any crop is to be dropped. In fact, latest statements of officials positively assert that present control will be continued.

RAMBLING ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

Knitting is more widespread in New York than at any time since the War, women taking their knitting with them on subways, and even to the movies.

Except on the coldest days, both Columbus Circle and Union Square offer a bit of sideshow to anyone who'll listen. The soap-box harangues range from heaven to communism in their choice of subjects.

Subway guards aren't so haughty, nor so rough, since two of them were arraigned last month for assaulting a passenger who, they said, had put a phoney nickel in the turnstile slot. Other passengers came to the rescue. A cop restored peace.

Hundreds of New Jersey commuters use little snub-nosed ferry boats across the Hudson—except when it is foggy. Though the ferries run regardless of the fog, many regular patrons prefer the jam in the Hudson-Manhattan tube trains to the eerie sound of foghorns, bells, whistles, and blind sailing.

Theater-going New York has taken kindly to Katherine Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet," the engagement having been extended again and again. Counting the performances on the road last year, Miss Cornell has played the Juliet role more than a hundred times.

Almost a hundred pieces of property between 34th and 42nd Streets and near the Hudson have been purchased by the Port Authority at a cost between four and five millions. They're preparing the right of way for the new Hudson River tunnel to run from 38th and 39th Streets to New Jersey. Demolition has already been started.

So many automobiles have been abandoned on the streets of New York that police have finally been forced to designate special graveyards for ancient cars. They're towed to the yards, and if the former owners can be located, they are presented with a bill for the privilege.

In spite of the fact that New York's Palace theater is no longer the headquarters for vaudeville it used to be, vaudevillians meet under its marquee daily—even though the moving picture billboards outside scream their oppressing competition.

To lunch with a native of Venezuela and learned the meaning of a tongue-tied press. Having published news of the Cuban situation which paralleled that of the Venezuela dictatorship, my friend was clapped into jail without explanation and without bail. Without friends he would have starved and rotted before being noticed again. He has wisely refrained from engaging in Venezuela journalism since.

"CANKER SORES"

Seldom a week goes by that I am not appealed to by people with the well-known "Canker-sores"—small ulcers of stomatitis. They occur anywhere within the buccal cavity—usually may be seen inside the mouth, on the walls that touch the outer surfaces of the teeth. No description necessary—but they occur from size of a pin-head up to large as a penny; never exactly circular, unless when very small. They are whitish, covered with mucous—nature doing all she can to repair. We are asked to "touch 'em up with caustic," which is the usual procedure. This doesn't cure the condition causing them—it just gives us a stall for time, until the digestive tract rights itself, I think.

The other day a young druggist came into my office; he had a distressing case; couldn't eat anything very salty, very tart, very cold or very hot. Maybe you have been that way.

I "touched 'em up" with 20% nitrate of silver solution. I told him as I have just told you—it was treating the symptom instead of the simple ailment. "You've got plenty of 'citro-carbonate' in the store, haven't you?" I asked. "Sure," he answered. "Then take three or four doses a day, between meals and at bedtime," was my direction. The patches disappeared within three days. The effervescent, alkaline mixture was easy to take, and, with brief directions as to too much greasy food; the cure was neither difficult nor unpleasant.

Now had my patient been a farm boy—several miles away from the drug store—it would have been different. I might have told him to buy a quarter's worth of Cream Tartar—and take a heaped teaspoonful in a glass of water, two or three times a day.
