war lessons generally have, and unless clearly evident economic signs and portents are largely wrong, this is a question that must be answered during the next decade if our present economic and governmental system is to endure."

Replying, apparently on behalf of the administration, to what he termed the "wailing cry of 'back to the constitution,'" Roper hurled what he called the "progressive and American challenge of 'forward with the constitution.'"

Most of the observers who heard him were of the opinion that the president had been informed beforehand of at least the general content of his speech. The "ifs" mentioned by Roper generally was considered to hinge upon coming actions by the supreme court.

Husband: "If we had a million dollars, do you know what I'd do with my share of it?"

Wife: "No, just what would you do with a thousand dollars, darling?"

Men's inventions cannot be of more value than men themselves. But it would be better that we sacrifice something of economic efficiency than to surrender these primary liberties.

"In them lies a spiritual right of men. Behind them is the conception which is the highest development of the Christian faith—the conception of individual freedom with brotherhood. From them is the fullest flowing of individual human personality."

Just Patience
"Patience and perseverance will accomplish all things," said the rather garrulous passenger in the railway carriage.

"Nonsense!" his fellow traveler sniffed. "Will patience and perseverance enable you to carry water in a sieve?"

"Certainly," the other said. "Simply by waiting patiently for the water to freeze."—Answers.
