Cold Weather 'Nips' Ornamental Plants

Boxwood, peonies, ivy and other ornamental plants suffered greatly from the severe winter just past, and fore particularly from the "cold snaps" during the early spring...

The cold damage was especially evident in the piedmont section, Garriss declared. "In most cases the killing out of plants took place where box bushes were weakened and suffering the effects of the drought last summer, or from other conditions."

The specialist said that fortunately only the young tender shoots stimulated into new growth during the short warm periods were the greatest sufferers from sudden drops in temperature.

Where only twigs have been killed, the plant pathologist recommends that these be pruned out and the bushes be sprayed thoroughly with a 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture every two weeks until continued hot weather prevails.

Plants heretofore healthy and vigorous, but weakened by the cold weather, will be more subject to disease and they should be sprayed regularly during the current season.

THIS MONTH ON THE FARM THE OPENING MONTH On The Farm and in The Home

Old Bolivar was fond of trees: He loved their cool and peaceful shade. Polly and Pete endorsed trees, too; And cheerfully bore all the toil; For shade draws moisture they well know...

Here are suggestions for the busy month of May from State College specialists: Enos Blair, Extension Service agronomist, says corn should be planted in the Piedmont and Mountain sections between May 1 and May 15. Coastal Plain growers should finish planting their corn by May 15 if possible.

Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist, warns against planting watermelons, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, tobacco, cotton, and other crops on the same land where will diseases caused serious losses the year before. The organisms causing will have lived over in the soil and have multiplied tremendously.

Mr. Steele was a native of Roanoke, Va. He was proprietor of a concrete working establishment. He spent some time in Goldsboro a number of years ago when his firm was connected with the paving of the streets here. He was an active member of the Methodist Church at Bennettsville.

Surviving are his widow, who was Miss Julia Sutton of Goldsboro, several sisters and brothers living in Roanoke, and one brother, George Steele of Raleigh. Funeral services were conducted at Bennettsville Saturday afternoon, and burial was in that city. Mrs. Waters and Mrs. Brown attended the funeral.

Marvin Ray Tyner, Jr., fifteen months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Tyner, died at the home on Aycock street last Wednesday afternoon. Funeral services were conducted at the home Thursday afternoon by the Rev. Verrico, pastor of the Church of God. Interment was in the family cemetery near Coor's Mill.

William H. Langston, 63, retired Wayne county farmer, died at the Goldsboro Hospital last Friday night after an illness of several years with heart trouble. His home was on the Seven Springs road, just south of Goldsboro. He is survived by six sons, James Langston of Washington, D. C., Leon and Alfred of Goldsboro, Edward of Sampson county, and Joe of Stanionsburg, four daughters, Mesdames W. B. Jones of Cary, Burrell Cauley of Kinston, and Brodie Smith of Durham, and Miss Sue Langston of Goldsboro; two brothers, Isaac Langston of Portsmouth, Va., and Clarence Langston of Goldsboro; and one sister, Mrs. John R. Roper of Goldsboro. Funeral services were conducted

HE DIDN'T HAVE A SHEEPSKIN

Very soon about 150,000 young people in the United States will be awarded college degrees. Think of that! Degrees! Sheepskin that will tell the world how smart they are!

He had to work incredibly hard to get it. He studied so late at night, with a poor light, that he almost went blind. His eyes got so bad that he had to give up study and get a job putting up telephone poles. The outdoor life helped his eyes, but did not cure them. Finally he went back to college and hired another student to read to him.

He graduated from Ohio University in 1904. It had taken him six years to get through. He took the college diploma home with him--and threw it into the wastebasket! Then he said, "Now I am going to start out and try to learn something."

Recently he was working on an invention to make the rays of the sun run an automobile. Don't call him crazy. That's been hurled at him too many times. The big thing in his life was that he realized that a college degree meant little; that it was just preparation for study and achievement.
