PLANT NOW FOR SUMMER GARDENS

A continuous supply of fresh vegetables may be obtained from the garden by arranging the crops so that new plantings will mature as earlier crops are harvested.

The entire garden may be kept busy by planting again in the areas left vacant by the harvesting of early crops. Sometimes an early crop can be followed by a later planting of the same vegetable.

H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist at State College, suggests that succession plantings of beets, garden peas, carrots, celery, and cauliflower may be made in the latter part of April or in May, depending upon the location.

Speaking generally of the western part of the State, he said that sweet corn should be planted as soon as the ground is warm enough. Tomato, pepper, and cabbage may be moved from the plant boxes to cold frames in May to harden them before setting them out in the open garden.

Other May plantings suggested are: snap beans, lima beans, beets, sweet corn, carrots, cucumbers, cantaloupes, okra, parsley, peas, endive, pepper, radish, salsify, and squash. Sow tomato seed again for late plant.

At this time, tomato seed may be sown in the open, about 25 seeds to each foot of row. After the plants come up, set them out two to four inches apart to develop strong roots before they are placed in the garden. A covering of pine straw or similar litter will hold moisture and check the growth of weeds.

Companion cropping may be practiced by setting cabbage or lettuce between rows of onions. Peas and tomatoes, lettuce and newly set strawberry plants, or onions and cantaloupes are other combinations which may be grown together.

SPECIAL PREMIUM FOR BEST GUERNSEY EXHIBIT

A special premium of $100 is being offered this year for the best county group of six or more Guernsey calves exhibited by 4-H club members at the North Carolina State Fair in October.

The premium, offered by the N. C. Guernsey Breeders Association, will be divided equally among the members who exhibit the winning group, said John Arey, extension dairy specialist at State College.

In addition to the special premium he said, the State Fair authorities are offering $485 in individual and group classes to 4-H Guernsey calf exhibitors.

Arey expressed belief that these prizes will arouse more interest in Guernsey calf club work, with the result that the exhibits this fall will be the largest and best displays ever shown at the State Fair.

TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q.—What is the value of the range shelter in poultry production?

A.—The range shelter is a recent addition to the development of practical poultry production and, as the name implies, supplies shelter for the birds during the developing age. The greatest value of the shelter is cheapness of construction. Due to the way it is built it can be readily moved from range to range thus reducing the hazard of soil infection. Plans for building these shelters may be secured by writing the Poultry Department at State College.

Q.—How often should cream be delivered to the creamery?

A.—During the warm months cream should be delivered at least twice a week and more often when practicable. Creamery managers in the State are paying a premium of one cent a pound of butterfat to all producers making two or more deliveries a week between April 1 and October 1.

tober 1. Each delivery must contain ten or more pounds of butterfat. Be sure that the cream is clean and kept in good condition at all times. Adjust the separator so as to deliver a 35 to 40 percent cream during the summer months. This cream will keep better than the low-test cream and frequent deliveries will pay a premium in high fat content.
