MANY VEGETABLES GROWN IN WINTER

The fall and winter garden should be a source of fresh vegetables for every rural family during the cold weather months, says Miss Mary E. Thomas, extension nutritionist at State College.

The primary objective of the fall and winter garden contest, sponsored by the extension service, is to stimulate the growing of more vegetables during this period of the year.

The contest is open to any home garden grown by a rural family in North Carolina. Details about the contest and the prizes may be obtained from county farm or home demonstration agents, Miss Thomas said.

The following suggestions regarding fall and winter gardens have been recommended by H. R. Niswonger and E. B. Morrow, extension horticulturists at the college.

In eastern North Carolina most of the fall and winter vegetables should be planted in September. It is too late for the tender crops, but the hardier vegetables will produce a good yield if planted now.

Among the vegetables to start at this time are: Siberian and green curled Scotch kale, head lettuce, mustard, spinach, turnips, radishes, and broccoli.

Cabbage and onion seed may be sown in outdoor beds the latter part of the month and transplanted in December January, or February, depending upon local climatic conditions.

In western North Carolina the tender vegetables must be given time to mature before the first killing frost, which usually occurs around the middle of October. For this year's crop, the plantings yet to be made must be limited to the hardier vegetables which will withstand cold weather and heavy freezes.

Predicts Farm Loan Expansion

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—With marked improvement in agriculture already apparent, and further improvement confidently expected, a greatly expanded volume of farm credit will be required, especially short-term credit, according to a statement here recently by W. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C. He was speaking before the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

"Some people have expressed a fear that the Cooperative Production Credit Associations are threatening the business of country banks, but these institutions have neither the desire nor the resources to monopolize a field which is still in the infancy of development," Governor Myers said. "Farmers who get their credit on time or by charge accounts have a basis for cash loans and should be buying their credit from a bank, production credit association or other institutions that sell credit on a business basis."

Just How Big Is The Telephone Company

THE Southern Bell Company is only as big as the people of North Carolina and the South have required it to be.

The more than three million people of this great State would not be satisfied with or be properly served by a company of less size, incapable of furnishing the high type of dependable, nation-wide service now required.

The telephone service needs of the people of North Carolina are large and it necessarily requires a large institution to do this big job. Nearly 17,000,000 local and long distance calls are made monthly in North Carolina, and the responsibility for the continuous operation of a service of such importance is large.

To operate, maintain and expand this intricate system requires a small army of more than 1,400 workers, whose annual payroll is $1,500,000.

Because of its size the telephone industry is also one of the largest contributors to the support of the State and its subdivisions by the payment of taxes. Its total tax bill in North Carolina for 1934 amounted to more than $660,000.

The telephone company of necessity is also a large user of raw materials, and spends large sums of money in North Carolina for the products of the State.

North Carolina is a big, important State, requiring a telephone company large enough to insure continuous, adequate and dependable telephone service—a service not limited by State lines, but world-wide in its scope.

A telephone company smaller in size and resources could not render such a service and would not be capable of serving the people of North Carolina satisfactorily.
