How A. T. & T. Ownership Aids Your Service

THERE is no mystery about the fact that the Southern Bell Telephone Company is owned by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and that the Western Electric Company is the manufacturing branch and supply agent of the entire Bell System.

The Bell System set-up is a natural one. It was created by the evolution of telephone service over a period of fifty years, as there developed a need for the various units. It has made possible the extensive and unequalled telephone service which North Carolina enjoys today.

Striking illustrations of its economy and value were given when a disastrous fire crippled the local and long distance service in Birmingham, Ala., when sleet storms devastated the telephone plant in the Carolinas and Tennessee and when floods and storms isolated large sections in the gulf states.

In each instance equipment, apparatus and supplies were speeded to the scene by truck and by train from Western Electric warehouses in Atlanta, New Orleans, Louisville and more distant points. Skilled Western Electric workers and experienced Bell telephone construction crews were rushed from far distant points.

The entire resources of the Bell System are available to the Southern Bell Company in any emergency. This relationship makes it possible to restore a vital service quickly and in an orderly and economical manner.

It is this coordination of effort and resources that has made your service so valuable and dependable, and such an important factor in the welfare and happiness of the people of this great State.

HESSEAN FLY CAN BE KEPT OUT OF WHEAT

The Hessian fly, which costs American farmers millions of dollars every year, can usually be kept out of wheat by sowing the seed during the fly-free period.

Since there is no remedy, once the fly has gotten in a field, said C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State College, the only way to control it is to keep it out of the wheat.

The fly-free periods vary in different parts of North Carolina. In the western part of the State it is from September 15 to October 5; in the Piedmont from October 1 to 15; and in the coastal plain area from October to November 1.

Every method of keeping the fly out of wheat should be followed, Brannon stated. Plow under all infested stubble soon after harvest. Destroy all volunteer wheat and plow the wheat land as early and deeply as possible. Prepare a pulverized compact seed bed, use good seed, fertilize well, and secure the cooperation of your neighbors, Brannon urged.

Hessian fly damage is caused by the maggots which feed on the plant between the leaf sheaths and the stems. Sometimes they kill the plants outright. Frequently the damage is so serious that the yield is greatly reduced.

The resting stage, or pupae, of the Hessian fly seen on wheat is often called "flaxseed." The adult fly, very small and resembling a mosquito, comes from this "flaxseed," Brannon pointed out.
