TRADE AT HOME
Mecklenburg county pays more sales tax into the State treasury than it gets back in the shape of school funds, for which she should thank her lucky stars.

PROFITS AND EMPLOYMENT
We do not believe that anyone will disagree with the statement by the President that "unemployment is the most difficult problem before the country."

Much as we would like to, we can't believe that the problem can be worked out in that direction. We do not believe, for instance, that the leaders of the textile industry can, by organized effort, bring about increased employment in their mills.

We are quite sure that every mill executive in the country would like to see his plant so busy that he could utilize every possible employee. That was his reason for building his plant in the first place and that was his hope when he began operations.

Textile markets have been suffering from a combination of troubles, emanating mainly from Washington. There is the threat of new taxes in cotton, the proposal to regulate the industry through the Ellenbogen bill, to mention only two.

Fortunately employment in textile mills is still at a rather high level. It cannot continue so, however, unless there is some assurance that there will be an end to one government proposal after another to handicap the efforts of the mills to earn enough money to keep their mills in full operation.

The best insurance against unemployment is freedom from government meddling.—Textile Bulletin.

GUILTY BRUNO
Bruno Richard Hauptmann had part in the kidnaping which resulted in the death of the first Lindbergh baby — of that there seems no doubt.

That was the big unanswered question that people asked themselves all across the nation, across the world, as the second for Hauptmann's execution drew near. For to many close students of the case it appeared impossible that one person, alone, could have accomplished the kidnaping.

For months while law officers were working hard on the trail which finally led to Hauptmann the kidnaping case seemed to have been dropped as unsolvable, almost to have been forgotten by forces of the law. Many of us are weary of the fuss and fury which have revolved around Hauptmann, himself, yet all of us are bound to want to see the case completely settled by eventual discovery, arrest, conviction and punishment of whatever other person or persons had part in the crime.—Goldboro News-Argus.

HERE and THERE
By Haywood E. Lynch

I dreamed the other night that the bank was held up and robbed. And in my dream Cashier Neill was almost scared to death. The next morning I stopped in the Bank to tell Brother Neill about my dream and how scared he was. He said that part of my dream is just about like it would be, because he certainly would be scared.

I stopped in Walters' Flowers this week and they certainly do have lots of beautiful flowers ready for Easter. They seem to have a thriving business and I am very glad to see it.

Pretty Sight: That new little girl at my house.

Three small boys went on a Daniel Boone trip this week. They wandered and wandered; they got lost. Night came on. The mothers and aunts of the boys began to worry. The aunts did some very good detective work and located the boys about half past nine for the night between here and York, S. C. After he "would be explorers" were safe in their home they were given a sound spanking and sent to bed, saying they would never, never go on such a journey again.

Kings Mountain should be a cleaner town now. We have a laundry.

I had the extreme pleasure of going through the finishing plant of the Margrace Mill this week. Genial Joe Thomson showed me around, and folks I did not know that there was so many bed spreads, and rugs in the whole world, and they had enough beautiful upholstery material to cover "A multitude of sins."

I went horse back riding last Saturday, and believe me, I sure had a sore week-end.

CLEAN UP DAY: The Civic League has decided on April 11 and 12 as Clean Up days. All residents of the town are urged to collect all rubbish and place in box or barrel in the street not later than April 12. On account of rain the Cleveland County Commencement was not held at Shelby Monday but will be held Friday.

Mrs. Earl Carpenter of Worth visited at Mr. J. T. McGill's last week. Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Willeford of Greenville, S. C., arrived Friday to spend a few days with his mother, Mrs. Willeford.

DISINHERITED?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Through successive generations the American people have continued to receive one of the richest heritages in all history.

Freedom of speech and of opportunity — the right to a decisive voice in the greatest government on earth — a national spirit of courage and self-reliance — public wealth beyond the dreams of Croesus —

These are but a few of the treasures won in the blood and the sweat of hard-working, hard-fisted pioneers and left to us as a natural birthright.

How are we preserving that heritage? What is America doing to maintain or increase for posterity the things our fathers won for us? What will this generation leave to those who follow?

Today the list seems discouraging. Its items would include:
A burden of national debt which, as this is written, exceeds $31,000,000,000 — instead of an increasing national wealth.

The threat of a new, alien philosophy of dependence and fear — instead of the spirit that sent Daniel Boone into the wilds of Kentucky and whole families over the hardships of the Oregon Trail.

A glorification of the economic goose-step — instead of the bold, free tread that could carry youth to whatever heights its strength and ability permitted.

No wonder, as it regards this prospect, youth in America feels disinherited. No wonder thousands of older citizens, remembering the opportunities of their own youth, are protesting against a philosophy which robs their sons of similar freedom. No wonder the true descendants of the American pioneer are insisting that personal liberty and personal opportunity must be preserved in this country.

Thousands of our ancestors fought and died to win for us those liberties and opportunities. Thousands more fought to preserve them. The newer generations have a right to enjoy the heritage. We cannot let them down.

To economic sanctions we shall answer with our discipline, our spirit of sacrifice, our obedience. To military sanctions we shall answer with militarism. To acts of war we shall answer with acts of war. — Mussolini.

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK
MARSHALL ARTHUR
Serialization by Emmel Kent by arrangement with Columbia Pictures

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE
James Buchanan, wealthy car manufacturer, wants a nice thing before marrying Evelyn Fletcher. He meets a lovely young girl, Joan, on a park bench, and she induces him — not knowing his real identity — to take a cooking butler job at Rossini Manor. Jim tells her he is an automotive designer, and when she sees his car designs, she tries to sell them to the Atlas Motor Company. Recognizing the Buchanan touch, the Atlas president has Joan arrested, thinking she stole the designs. Rossini, furious, has Joan bailed out. Meanwhile, Jim has been persuaded by his friend, Bob, to give up the wild game. Jim, heartbroken, leaves a note for Joan, which Rossini shoves her.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER V
It was hard for Joan to realize that Jim was gone. Nothing left of those few days of heaven but a note. Rossini tried his best to console the heartbroken girl, but Rossini wasn't versed in the gentle art of consoling a lovelorn woman. "... somehow," he said, "I sensed you weren't married all along... all the time he's going to marry this pain-in-the-neck." His eyes were cold as steel. "A punk like that ought to be rubbed out." He nodded. "Yes — rubbed out." Rossini turned to Flash. "Flash you're going to a wedding — with some of the boys." His tone had a sinister ring. "This wedding isn't going to come off, see? Buchanan deserves it!" "But — but she's only your cook!" "I'm going to marry her, Flash — and what I'm asking of you will be part of the wedding present." Flash left, his mind filled with the unpleasant duties on hand. Joan was called in and shown the newspaper. Her eyes flared. "He must have been laughing at me all the time — getting a great kick out of kidding me along." "He isn't going to worry you any more — just leave him to me!" Joan was still furious. "I'd like to see you wipe up the floor with him." "I'm going the limit for you, sister — and no matter what I do, it's better than that skunk deserves!" Rossini sat down, satisfied. "I've got it all fixed — there'll be no wedding — and no Buchanan!" Fear crossed Joan's face. "No Buchanan! Oh — don't — don't do anything rash, Mr. Rossini!" "Buchanan's off your knife — forget him." "Oh — this is terrible." Joan shuddered. "Mr. Rossini you've got to stop Flash — you've got to stop him fast!" "What's the idea?" Rossini was bewildered. "But I didn't know what I was talking about. If anything happened to Jim, I'd never forgive myself!" (Posted by Leo Carrillo and Jean Arthur.)

that's why I made that play for you that night. I'm sorry I was so crude about it. I misjudged you — but you appealed to me — appealed to me a lot."
"You make it hard for me to stay, sir." Joan was uncomfortable, "unless you treat me like a cook."
Rossini made a wry face. "I don't want to treat you like a cook. I want to treat you like — like — you were Mrs. Rossini! Yes, it's a proposal — when I make up my mind I make it up fast." He squeezed Joan's hand. "And you've got everything. If you say yes, I'll change my whole life around. I'll quit the rackets and start dealing from a new deck — that's more than James did for you."
Joan smiled. Rossini's speech had touched her. "I'm sorry. But when I make up my mind, I don't make it up so fast." She walked hurriedly into the kitchen.
Flash burst into the room waving a newspaper, his face excited and red. "Chief! Take a gander at this!" He thrust the paper in front of Rossini.
Rossini read. "James Buchanan to wed Evelyn Fletcher at — so what?" "But look at the picture!"
Rossini looked and his mouth hung open. "That's James!"
"That," said Flash with emphasis, "is Buchanan!"
Rossini's mouth tightened new. "fooling around with Joan when
