ON CURES FOR COLDS

On meeting a friend in the street, and upon being asked the inevitable "How do you do?" I immediately say, "Just fine, thank you," and hurry on, holding my breath all the time for fear that a sneeze may betray the fact that I have a cold.

(A cold, of course, calls for the friend's remedy for "immediate relief and positive cure.")

And on finally finding myself out of sight of the would-be friend just mentioned, I joyously sneeze into the face of my next door neighbor, who exclaims, terrified, "Why, my dear, you have a cold!" (I now have just what I've been dodging all afternoon!) My neighbor then goes into detail about the prescription her mother always gave her and her sister. Thus, we come into sight of our humble abodes, and I politely decline her invitation to join her for a few minutes while she writes down her prescription for me. I promptly assure her that I remember it and will certainly try it.

Eagerly I enter my house, knowing that no cold remedies will greet me there! But, alas, the radio proudly shouts to me: "Don't cough your head off! Ask for . . ."

By this time I have hastily thrown my bundles on the nearest chair, rushed to the radio and quite rudely turned the dial to the nearest station. I am now reminded of the old adage, "When it rains, it pours", for I am greeted with another form of cold cure. Instead of the recent remedy, I am told to gargle with . . .

The interesting advertisement continues to inform us that "Clinical experiments on actual people show value of antiseptic treatment in controlling colds. Medical supervisors selected large numbers of people and divided them into two groups. One group gargled with . . . The other did not. In a majority of the tests those who gargled with . . . twice a day, or oftener, caught fewer colds than "non-garglers." Also we learn that when the faithful garglers did finally catch colds, they were extremely mild and, of course, of very short duration!

On turning to my favorite magazine for enjoyment, I am immediately presented with the plan by which the world-famous Dionne quintup-

Large Crowd At Sunrise Service

Large crowds attended the 349th Easter Sunrise services here last Sunday. It was estimated that between 300 and 500 attended the outdoor service conducted by St. Matthews Lutheran Church in front of the High School. Rev. L. Boyd Hamm was assisted in this service by Rev. W. M. Boyce of the A. R. P. Church.

About 100 were present for the early morning services at Central Methodist Church. Rev. E. W. Fox was in charge of this service, assisted by Rev. P. D. Patrick of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. W. A. Parsons of Grace Methodist Church.

HONOR ROLL TO BE PRINTED NEXT WEEK

The monthly Honor roll of the Kings Mountain Schools will be printed in the Herald next week. All but one of the lists came in this week, but it was thought best for all the schools to be printed in one issue. So smart boys and girls look for your name in the Herald next week.

Clyde R. Hoey Invades East

Raleigh, April 15.—Making his first campaign into Eastern North Carolina since he announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Clyde R. Hoey last week "took off his gloves" in a vigorous defense of the North Carolina Democratic organization from the attack launched by "Ralph McDonald of Illinois."

The candidate spoke to "excellent crowds" in Greenville, New Bern, Fayetteville, Dunn and Lillington, then jumped west to make two speeches in Surry County.

"The charge has been made that the Democratic party is machine controlled," said Mr. Hoey in his several speeches in the East. "It is an old charge. The Republicans have been making it for 30 years, but it is new to hear this line of attack from a man seeking the nomination for Governor of the party he attacks."

The only cause for McDonald's tactics is that he knows neither the party nor this State, in which he has lived but a few years. Perhaps he got North Carolina politics mixed up with the politics played in his native State, Illinois, where Big Bill Thompson's Republican machine held sway so long.

"All that Gilliam Grissom, the Republican nominee for Governor needs to do is to take the speech being delivered by McDonald, change a few words and use it during the fall campaign."

"I venture to predict that whatever the outcome of the primary, McDonald's speech will be the text of the Republican campaign before the election."

"But whether delivered by McDonald or Grissom, the charge of 'machine control' is easy to answer. We Democrats have been answering it ever since we ousted the Republican 35 years ago. The thing McDonald calls 'machine' is the party organization, made up of the men and women who vote the Democratic ticket and work for its election, the men and women who believe in the Democratic party, who every other June choose the candidates whom they believe will best serve the State and every other November go down the line for the election of the Democratic ticket."

"That organization, or 'machine' if you prefer, has been responsible for the election of the last nine Governors of North Carolina. It was responsible for the great majority North Carolina gave Franklin Roosevelt in 1932 and it will be responsible for North Carolina's part in the Roosevelt victory this fall."

"Yes, I am an organization Democrat, I believe in organization. I'm proud of my State and what it has done for this party since we took the state government from the Republicans. No one would claim that every administration has been perfect, that mistakes have not been made, but I challenge McDonald and Grissom to name another State where the party is power has had such a record as ours."

Mayor J. E. Herndon has been informed by Mr. Broadway, district engineer, for the State Highway Department, that the road from Kings Mountain to the Gaston County line towards Cherryville will be constructed immediately. The road is to be of tar and gravel. It is about five miles to the Gaston County line from Kings Mountain.

It is hoped and thought by those in charge that the road will soon be completed to the present hardsurfaced road from Bessemer City to Cherryville. When completed this road will be 9 miles in length.

Council Visits Highway Office

Four members of the Town Council went to Raleigh to confer with State Highway officials about the proposed overhead bridge for Kings Mountain. The four who made the trip are as follows: Jim Willis, W. K. Mauney, Joe Neisler and B. C. Gold. It was thought by those who made the trip that announcement would be made in a few days about this project.

The overhead bridge proposition has been hanging undecided for some time. According to the Cleveland Star a compromise was reached last Wednesday. The Shelby paper had the following:

The city of Kings Mountain property owners and road officials have never gotten together on the grade crossing elimination there. At a conference held Wednesday night, progress was made toward a compromise which might be reached if the proposal is approved in Washington.

When Mayor J. E. Herndon was asked about the compromise he stated to the Herald that he knew nothing about any compromise that had been made. It is understood that the overhead bridge and highway is to cost when completed $99,000.00.

AUTHORITY ON ARTIC WILD LIFE TO BE AT IMPERIAL THEATRE

Mr. Earle F. Hammond who was with Wilkins on his Detroit Arctic Expedition, and has for six years lived with the Eskimo in Alaska and Siberia will make a personal appearance on the stage at the Imperial Theatre here Monday night and Tuesday afternoon and night of next week.

Mr. Hammond has played in three motion pictures pertaining to the far Northland. Mr. Hammond, with his picturesque beard, will have with him his Alaskan Eskimo Dog troupe.

The people of Kings Mountain and surrounding community are exceedingly fortunate in being able to see and hear Mr. Hammond who is a gifted lecturer on the frozen north.

The way they hurl it about, you'd think politicians had never heard of soil conservation.

Washington Snapshots

Washington. — (IPS) Behind closed doors and after the usual office hours, some of the political master minds in Washington are engaging in heated discussions about how to set up a "mistake-preventing" agency.

For months, some administration chiefs, especially those in Congress, have felt there should be a clearing house to handle all matters verging on politics. The trouble was that everybody wanted the final say-so, hence they did nothing but talk about it. But the fat now is on the fire, and they are trying to translate talk into action.

Two mishaps were responsible for the new move. The first occurred before the House Ways and Means Committee during hearings on the new corporate surplus tax. Witness after witness told how the tax would penalize stockholders in companies which survived the worst of the depression only because they had been able to save up for a rainy day.

In the first week of the hearings, the only ones to endorse the idea were government witnesses. Then, suddenly, up popped a new endorser (Cont'd on back page)

The Evils of Intemperance

By IRVIN S. COBB

A CERTAIN newspaper proprietor in New York who always was—and still is, even in these prohibition days, a total abstainer—dropped into the office just before press time, and found the assistant managing-editor in charge.

"Where's Blank?" he asked naming the managing editor. "Off on one of those periodical tears of his," answered the assistant. "Where's the city-editor?" "Pied—down in Andy Horn's." "I didn't see the make-up editor as I came through the composing-room. What's become of him?" "He's in a Turkish bath over in Brooklyn getting a bun boiled out of him." The proprietor dropped into a chair, shaking his head sadly. "Well," he said, "for a person who never touches a drop I seem to suffer more from the effects of drunkenness than any other man in this town."
