TOM AND GEORGE

Tom: "What would you say, George, that the meanest man in the world was?" "I believe, said George, "that it is the one who gets crumbs in the bed by eating crackers after he retires." We believe that one of the meanest men in the one who tells his wife that they've gotten along so far with the furniture they have and refuses to let his wife replenish now and then with new.

Small Grain Yields Could Be Increased

The average small grain yield on Tar Heel farms is only a fraction of what it could be if growers would use more care in preparing the land, selecting good seed, and fertilizing with the proper mixture, said W. H. Rankin, agronomist at the Agricultural Experiment Station at State College.

For example, he said, the average oat yield is only 20 bushels per acre, but yields of more than 50 bushels are possible with good seed on good land.

Growing small grains in rotation with legume crops, particularly lepezea, will boost yields many bushels per acre. Preparation of the land for seeding this fall should have started with a thorough disking of the fields in July or August.

The use of good seed is of utmost importance, he continued. The variety should be adapted to the locality, and resistant to cold and disease, also capable of producing high yields of full-bodied grain.

For average soils in Piedmont Carolina, where most of the State's small grain is grown, 200 to 400 lbs. of 4-10-4 fertilizer per acre should be applied, and if needed an additional application of soluble nitrogen should be given the following spring.

The time of seeding must be considered, too, since many growers sow their small grain too late to produce a good stand that will go thru the winter in good condition and be ready to make a rapid, vigorous spring growth.

KRITICAL MOMENTS AND HOWLARIOUS SCOOPS
(By The Tattlers)

Who who, make way for the king of the gossip columns, we go, news to spread and very little time and space in which to spread it.

This week we really have a Howlarious Scoop. It's the romance that locns on the freshman horizon, and the principals are none other than that Red headed Tate kid who toots a horn, and the blond Thomas brau who leans on your's truly's desk while she checks the roll each day in study hall. Whooh whooh! Chug chug! Wow!

The kritical moment of the week came when Johnny came face to face with George after he read last week's column. P. S. Don't send flowers to the hospital, he didn't hit George.

The best to drift in our direction yet is the one about John Styers and the other night. Would't you boys just love to be interees?

Are "Daisy Mae" and Dot really serious? Many will nod an affirmative to that one.

We wonder if Miss Morris is going to the game tonight. And if she will it'sy Bitay be there.

But goodnight, now, 'cause we're almost as sleepy as Helen and Sara were Sunday night.
