THANKSGIVING

For the hay and the corn and wheat that is reaped,
For the labor well done, and the barns that are reaped,
For the sun and the dew and the sweet honeycomb,
For the rose and the song, and the harvest brought home—
Thanksgiving! Thanksgiving!

For the trade and the skill and the wealth in our land,
For the cunning and strength of the working-man's hand,
For the good that our artists and poets have taught,
For the friendship that hope and affection have brought—
Thanksgiving! Thanksgiving!

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

I DON'T know whether brides can cook nowadays or not. Probably they do. They got so much cooking in the schools now that you'd think a girl couldn't hardly get through the a b c's without knowing how to make a pie. But they still tell the stories about the bride's grub.

One guy come home without buying himself any fortifications at the lunch counter down town, he was in such a hurry to see how his new wife was getting along with her cooking. Well, he was sorry he come so soon or so late when he tasted the pork chops. They were burnt.

"I don't quite understand these pork chops," he says.
"Well," she says, "neither do I. They taste mighty funny. I burned them a tiny bit, but then I rubbed some of that ointment on them that's guaranteed to cure burns if you put it on right away. It only took me a minute to do it, but maybe it wasn't soon enough."

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON
(Opinions Expressed in This Column Are Not Necessarily the Views of This Newspaper.)

Washington has an ample supply of food for thought this week.

As though analyzing election results was not sufficient exercise for the mental giants of the capital, the results of a public poll on questions dealing with business reform has cropped up for them to think about.

The poll, conducted by Fortune Magazine evidences a public attitude on the reform question that has both surprised and alarmed some of those in the Brain Busting war council chambers. And it comes just as the Brain Busters are ready to descend in flying squadrons on the monopoly investigating committee with requests for more reforms and government control of business.

First and most important among the attitudes revealed by the poll was this: The Nation believes overwhelmingly that profit is the main-spring of recovery. In other words, the public believes recovery can be (Cont'd on Editorial page)

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

And It Wasn't Moving Day Either

By IRVIN S. COBB

IN KENTUCKY in the old days, we had for the chief-justice of our highest court a gallant old Confederate Cavalryman. After his retirement from the bench he decided to see something of the world. He got on the train and came to New York. Arising early the next morning he set out for a walk in the great city, going south on Broadway. After a while he came to Canal Street, then, as now, one of the busiest cross-town arteries and likewise the widest river-to-river street in lower Manhattan. Here, for a space, the old judge stood on the edge of the curbing watching the quadrupled lines of vehicular traffic that passed him east and west. As far as he could see in either direction there was no end to the interweaving tangles of loaded trucks and wagons and vans and delivery cars.

At length he made his way to where a policeman stood on the middle of the roadway directing travel.

"Excuse me, sub," inquired the visitor, in his rich Southern accent, "but are you connected with the city government yere?"

"I'm a policeman, if that's what you mean," answered the bluecoat. "So I judged from your costume and deportment," said the venerable Kentuckian.

"Anything I can do for you?" inquired the officer, stirred to special affability by the courteous manners of the stranger.

"No, son, I reckon not," said the judge benignantly, "but if it's not too much trouble I would like to ask you a question."

"Go ahead with the question."

"Well, sub," prefaced the judge, "you boys outfity have got a lovely city here—I'll say that much. But tell me, son, haven't you got powerfully behind with your hauling, someway?"
