KRITICAL MOMENTS AND HOWLARIOUS SCOOPS

(By The Tattlers)

Ting-a-ling, here we come! With school open again, it seems a lot easier to gather gossip and stuff. So this week we bring you the goods.

Among the questionable stuff, we find ourselves wondering why Dot ducked at the drug the other night. An anonymous note asks is how a certain young fellow named Earl felt. We don't know, but we have a faint idea!

The Prince girls had a party the other night, and news flew thick and fast concerning it. It all grinds down to this, however: Vivian and a certain fellow with a Jr. on his name like to play a game called "ice cream!"

What, we wonder, would happen to many of the guys and gals if it were not for Maggie?

Fred Wright has it bad, these days. Monday we sneaked up behind him in Literature class and found him making moon eyes at a picture of Helen which he carried in his pocketbook.

Jots 'n jests: Who did I hear that Gogle dated one night recently.... Jones and Hazel are still doing OK....! Isn't Billy Rhodes a cute cupid....? At least he takes that manance....! There are also several others.... Gene Tate writes even more sentimental notes than George can....! What is Bo doing these days....? Good by.
