

Extra Bread Eating To Consume Wheat

New Yrk, May 22.—(IPS).—If every person in the United States ate an extra slice of bread a day, it would require the production of an additional 8,000,000 barrels of flour in this country every year, according to Dr. James A. Tobbey, prominent health authority here.

As the result of this increase in the use of the staff of life, the approximately 28,000 bakers of America would bake nearly two and a half billion more loaves of bread a year, or an average addition to their business of 252 loaves per baker per day, and the problem of our wheat surplus would be solved, he said.

For the first time in history, every cotton organization in America is giving active support to a great cotton sales event — National Cotton Week of 1939.

More than 100,000 retail stores are scheduled to participate in National Cotton Week — the biggest sales event that cotton has ever experienced.

Farm Questions

Q.—Does the feeding of a moist mash aid in egg production?
A.—There is little to be gained by feeding moist mash continuously through the year, but it has an important place in feeding laying hens during the summer months. It will stimulate production in laying hens from June until October by increasing the consumption of animal protein and producing an appetizing effect on the birds when egg production is subnormal. The best time to feed the mash is about two o'clock each day. Three pounds of the regular laying mash moistened with hot water or milk for each 100 birds will give excellent results.
