TOM AND GEORGE

George: "Tom, when my wife called me a block head the other day (but not in so many words), how do you suppose she put it?" Tom: "I suppose she said pull down your cap here comes a woodpecker." That's coming mighty close to the real thing. Here's another real thing: our living room suites are direct from the factories and represent the very last word in artistic beauty and comfort.

H. E. L. has just given the order: "Make it short," and since it's time to go to press, we'll do just that. A little this, a little that, an maybe a little of the other, then well say "cherio" 'n stuff.

Diggin' in: Tom Fulton made a sorta bet with me last week—then he proceeded to prove to me that he can do things in a big way when he takes a notion — Said Tom when I interviewed him before the opening of the highway: "Don't mention me. I'm just sorta looking after things." Then he proceeded to 'put on the dog' as a speaker And the guy is good at it We had a reply about the last edition crack about using "darn" and are we happy that we said what we did... Paul McGinnis says that he named most of his brothers and sisters then could not think up one for his own latest son Finally named it for his boss man Except that Mr. Keeter insists that his name is John Byron, and not Johnny Byron Reports are that some of the kids who went off to school are ter-rible for the sight of some of them Goodby, now.

During the past five years economy in fuel consumption by automobiles has been improved more than 10 per cent through refinements in design and manufacture.
