"Cut it short," has become so commonplace around here that we sometimes believe that it's all a premeditated attempt to smother a genius with lack of space. Anyway, we heard it again today. But we doubt heeding.

Last week, it seems, while everyone around here was wrapped up in a near home football game, and talking about how the Mountaineers "took" the Deaf lads, a former local Grid Gladiator was burning up the white stripes elsewhere. Eppie Neisler (Paul, Jr.), former Kings Mountain High back is playing regularly with McCallie's Prep team, and literally, according to reports, romping over all sorts of competition. He has been featured in Chattanooga (Tenn.) paper, recently, as the team's spark plug.

When Charlie Thomasson comes to town in the morning, the Mountaineers begin to work. In fact, they start making preparations. We believe ahead of time, for his coming. Any morning that you come to town and peep into the Drug, you can see any number lined up and drinking "dope" with Mr. Thomasson. However, he always has chocolate — often two of them.

And while we're here — Charlie can do more things than almost any person we know. Monday he (and we) decided that we wanted a new picture of the band. He told us what to do to get it, and then did it himself. The result—a big, new cut of the band — on the front page today. And at the same time he planned and put over the biggest and best meeting of the PTA in history. And had the biggest attend ance.

Aside: "Gin" Logan (formerly AS IT GOES), was in town over the week-end .... And says she's dropped journalism .... Martin Harmon, editor of "The Daily Tar Heel" has a couple of the best columnists in the state on his paper .... One, Shelly Rolfe, is undoubtedly the greatest sports editors on any Collich paper we've ever seen .... And did he razz Wake Forest ....? David Gillispie, Gastonia "Gazette's" sports writer, may know football, but when it comes to bands, he should lay low, and listen to folks who know.....
