But a group of members of the National Speleological Society, came here from Washington recently and with scant respect for copper head moccasins, crawled through the fissures, and exploded in amazement.

They found that the noises were caused by boulders which break loose from the top of the subterranean crevices and thunder down to the bottom of the caves.

The caves had never been fully explored before.

National News

Atlantic City, July 30.—Vacationists were agog, the police department was jittery and the city's 18 remaining gambling places were open today following four sudden, simultaneous gambling raids led by slambang Mayor Tom Taggart and his trusty sl-shooter.

The recently-elected mayor, a revolver tucked in a pocket of his white linen suit, launched the raids on four of Atlantic City's best known night spots early yesterday while Police Chief James McMennamin was at home sleeping.

London, July 30.—British soldiers, whose fathers fought the last war in muddy, vermin-infested trenches, may be billeted this winter in luxurious London apartments, many of them with swimming pools and squash courts.

The government announced today it was taking over many apartment houses, including some in which apartments normally rent at $25,000 a year. With luxury demands gone since the war started the owners are happy to get the little the government will pay.

Philadelphia, July 30.—A giant "atom smasher" which fires electrically-charged "atomic bullets" in the interest of science has been completed at the University of Pennsylvania. It will be one of the attractions at the University's bi-centennial celebration Sept. 16-21.

"The most important by-product of this war on the atom, so far at least, is artificially-produced radio active material," said Professor L. N. Kidenour, who supervised construction of the machine. "The amount of radio active material for medical work can be multiplied many-fold."

New York, July 30.—Secretary of War Stimson got his first eighteen gun salute this morning.

Stimson and his new assistant, former Federal Judge Robert Patterson, arrived at the Army's Mitchell Field, on Long Island, from the Secretary's West Hills home to take a plane to Washington.

Field officials thumbed over the regulation books and found that the Secretary of War is entitled to an eighteen-gun salute on entering office and an additional salute once a year, and figured that while they had him handy to some guns they might as well do him the honor.

Local Man Saves Two Ladies From Drowning

The following from "Along the Avenue" column in the Gastonia Gazette will be of interest to Herald readers:

John and Elizabeth Mason, just back from a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Neisler of Kings Mountain at their summer cottage at Cherry Grove Beach are telling of a rescue adventure more exciting and nerve wracking than any dare-devil motion picture they ever witnessed.

The Neislers and Masons were having breakfast in the former's cottage located on an inlet where the current is very swift. Hearing screams from the water they went out to the porch and realized that two girls in the water were in trouble. A rope was thrown out to them and when they came in they told a hysterical story of two other women who had already been carried far out beyond the breakers. Mr. Neisler has a Kayak boat, a small canoe like craft built for navigating waves and rapids. He and Robert Underwood, of Durham, sprang into this boat while other men on the shore raced to Ocean Drive for life-guards. Mr. Neisler rowed the boat while Mr. Underwood endeavored to catch hold of one of the exhausted girls. Only one could be rescued at a time and the victim could not be put into the small boat but had to be held on the side of it. Time and again the waves swept boat and victim apart, but finally one girl was caught up on the side of the boat. The men told the other to battle as best she could and they would be back for her. On the shore the life guards were waiting and ready to assist the men if necessary, and blankets and other first aid measures were at hand. When the boat returned for the other girl she was too exhausted and lifeless to lift her arms to catch the oar held out to her and Mr. Underwood managed to catch hold of the back of her bathing suit and bring her to the side of the boat.

On the shore the watchers were tense, since the boat, going over the crest of the big waves, would be entirely lost to view for minutes at a time.

The women who were rescued were Louise Irlak and a Mrs. Plummer, of Florence, S. C. who had driven to the beach to spend the day.

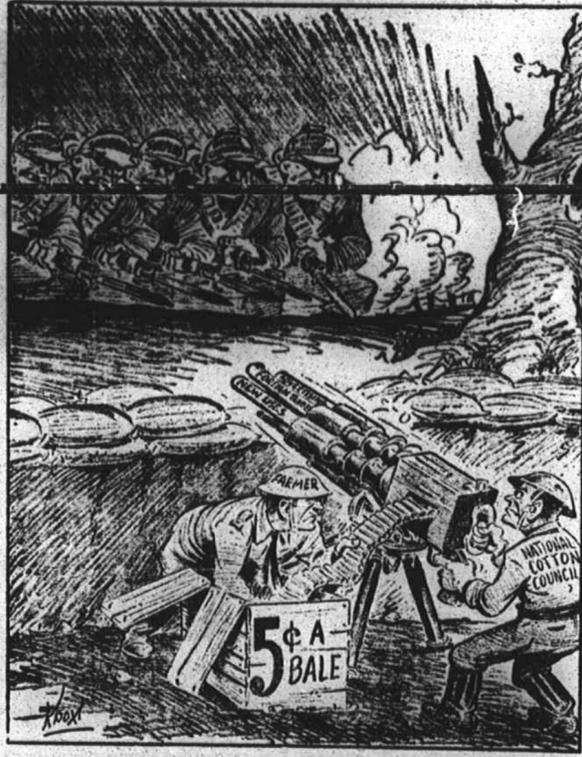

"It was the finest piece of work I ever saw," said Elizabeth. "If the men had rehearsed what they did it couldn't have clicked more perfectly. Two in the boat, two off for life-guards, and others bringing blankets and other needed things to the shore. But, when it was over none of us could move and none of us wanted to go in the water—not that day."

Nickel-A-Bale War Chest For Cotton On Way

Council President Calls For Universal Service in Battle for Increased Consumption.

Cotton firms and cotton farmers of Cleveland county and surrounding area were called on today by President Oscar Johnston of the National Cotton Council for "100 percent allegiance in cotton's total war for increased consumption."

In a message addressed to local producers throughout the country President Johnston declared that "the raw cotton industry is arming as never before in its history to smash down the blitzkrieg of substitutes, surplus, and foreign competition."

The message came simultaneously with the National Cotton Council's announcement of a "universal service" plan to provide funds with which to carry on the fight during the coming year. The plan, to go into effect August 1, calls for a defense fund of five cents on every bale of lint and three cents on every ton of seed, mobilized with the help of each of the five primary raw cotton interests.

Under the new plan, arrangements have been perfected enabling the producer to make his nickel-a-bale contribution at the first point of sale, either to the cotton merchant, large or small, or the ginmer or warehouseman acting as merchant. This contribution is carried on from merchant to compressor, who remits the accumulated funds to the Council when the bale is first compressed, or from merchant to textile mill which remits on uncompressed cotton.

Similar contributions on seed, which are made by the ginmer and crusher, are assembled and remitted to the war chest by the oil mills.
"For 50 years we cotton farmers have been talking about an organization like the National Cotton Council to defend our markets and find new ones through judicious advertising, intelligent research, and organized opposition to restrictive legislation," said Mr. Johnston. "At last we have it, and in two years, equipped with modern weapons, it has accomplished more than any of us thought was possible in so short a period."
Domestic consumption has been back virtually to the all-time high, with every indication that a new record can be set in 1942. Plans are ready for a vigorous attack on the acute problem of foreign trade. Council scientists are on the trail of new uses. A united cotton industry has gone to war."

(Opinions Expressed in This Column Are Not Necessarily the Views of This Newspaper.)

It was a month ago, or a little longer. Adolf Hitler was behind the front lines of the German army that was surging over France like successive banks of grey fog. He had granted one of his rare interviews to an American newspaper correspondent. And the reporter asked Hitler about the "fifth column."

The "fifth column" is now the classic phrase used to describe the activities of the traitors and saboteurs in European countries who laid the preliminary groundwork for the Nazi successes before a single blow was struck on either side.

The phrase was originated by the rebel General Mola during the Spanish War. Mola declared that his troops would capture Madrid because there were four strong columns of soldiery advancing on the city and also a "fifth column" of fascist sympathizers within the gates. Cont'd on Editorial page.

Laughing Around the World

Stylish Language Indeed!

FOR YEARS, a certain worthy and highly intelligent old colored woman did our family washing. One Saturday night she sat in the kitchen of our home favoring her feet. My mother came to the kitchen door to chat with her a little while.

Aunt Milly, although very devout, did not seem to care deeply for the present pastor of her church.
"Mis' Manie," said Aunt Milly, "I'm goin' to tell you how I put that there biggity preachin' man in his place. Yere yestiddy evenin' jes' fo' supper-time, I wuz settin' on my front porch w'en the Rev'n Rogers come along, by. He sees me settin' there an' he stops an' fumbles with the gate latch, an' he sez to me he sez, 'Sis' Carter, I would have speech with thee—jest lak that."
"Now, I ain't aimin' to let no nigger whatsoever use no' stylish language what I kin. So I sez right back to him, I sez, 'Rev'n, draw nigh an' yo' shall be heard!'"
"But no sooner do he start in to speak 'en I know what 'is he's fixin' to say. He fixin' to ax my sympathy on 'count of that tore-down limb of a unmarried daughter of his'n havin' got here' mixed up in a scandalizin' an' bein' tawked about all over the neighborhood."
"Rev'n, I sez, 'Hold! Yere last fall, I sez, 'w'en my husband, Isiah Carter at the age of seventy-fo', w'en he should a' knowed better, wuz makin' hissef kind of promiscuous by hangin' around two of the lady members of the congregation, an' I went to you, I sez, 'an' axed you, as the pastor, to 'monstrate wid him, what did you do? Jest because he'd done give you five dollars for the new organ fund, you tole me to shut up my black mouth an' go on home an' tend to my own business."
"Rev'n, I sez, 'ex yo sows, so shall ye reap!"
