ONE REAL DIFFERENCE

There is only one real difference after all between the successful man and the unsuccessful man. They both have ideas, but the successful man does something with them.

JAPAN OUTLAWS ROTARY

Japan has now discovered that the Rotary club are "hotbeds of espionage" and consequently the Japanese clubs, yielding to pressure, are changing their relations with the international organization.

Incidentally, it is to be remembered that Germany and Italy have already discovered that Rotary clubs are dangerous. They are barred from both countries.

It is interesting to note that these countries, when undertaking their aggressive programs, make a point to outlaw organizations, like the Masons and Rotary, which exist in practically every free country of the world.

PEOPLE WANT DEFENSE, NOT WAR

A financial authority recently made this significant observation: "Let us be on guard against the building of a war hysteria. Let us keep it clearly in mind that what we are talking about is defense and not going to war."

The standard polls indicate that while the American people are almost unanimously in favor of adequate preparedness, they are also overwhelmingly opposed to belligerent participation in the European slaughter.

Industry does not want war because, if for no higher reason, it knows from its experience in the last World War that it results in ruinous taxation and depression.

TO BATHE OR NOT TO BATHE

Sitting snugly in 95 percent of the world's bathtubs, the people of the United States seldom realize that one of the world's burning questions is: To bathe or not to bathe.

The American Medical Association News recently reported the discussion of bathing customs over the world, in which the researcher found that Parisians average a bath every four months, while in Moscow—where a bathtub costs more than a grand plant—the average is 18 months.

If the people of this country sit snugly, the Japanese sit snugly. Their equipment consists of a barrel-shaped wooden vat, narrow and round, that permits only of sitting or squatting.

In the deserts of Arabia, the researcher says, a bath is always handy; one picks up a handful of sand and starts scrubbing.

LAND OF MILK AND HARMONY

The fabulous lands of ancient times were those that were mentioned as being rich in milk and honey. Agriculture was the one great source of wealth in those days; talk of milk and honey emphasized that fact.

Centuries later, it was America that set the pace in creating industry—the making of goods—as an even greater source of wealth and human well-being.

Today, as a result, the United States is rich both in agricultural produce and in manufactured goods. And to begin with, as far as farming goes, it is a land tremendously rich in milk, though honey isn't as important as it used to be.

That's a lot of milk. Much of it is processed to make cheese and vari-

Tom Fulton said he had never had so much fun in his life on such a small amount of money. He only spent $11 for both himself and Nell.

Ben Goforth was the last person to make up his mind to go, the bus waited in front of his house while he changed clothes for the trip.

Mrs. O. W. Myers took along a bottle of ammonia, but others in her bus used it before she needed any.

Major J. B. Thomason just could have made the trip as far as sleep was concerned, he stayed awake to meet "Miss Agnes" when she came in at 1:25 A. M.

N. C. Progresses Under National Farm Program

The story of agriculture in North Carolina during the past seven years under the National Farm Program is a story of more income, more conservation, and more security, says Dr. I. O. Schaub, director of the State College Extension Service.

Here are some of the facts and figures Dr. Schaub cited in reporting on the progress: The cash income of North Carolina farmers was 148 percent higher in 1939 than in 1932.

Under conservation, 228,100 North Carolina farmers participated in the 1939 AAA program, representing about 67 percent of the State's crop land. Participation is even higher in 1940.

Good seed, proper cultivation, good weather, and boll weevil control measures have been responsible for Pitt County's finest cotton crop in years says C. D. Griggs, assistant farm agent.

During 1939 a total of 1,175,800 trees were planted with Federal assistance.

Farmers are also more secure in their homes. From 1935 to 1940 15,824 farm families received rural rehabilitation loans totalling more than $7,670,000.

Concord Pastor At Lutheran Church Sunday

Rev. Leifco C. Bumgardner, of St. Andrews Lutheran Church of Concord, N. C., will be in the pulpit at St. Matthews Church Sunday morning.

From one acre of pole beans, the first he had ever planted, Bill Kenner of the Walnut Creek section of Macon County made a net profit of $175 this summer.

Gardening Becomes Year-Round Project

No longer is gardening considered exclusively a summer enterprise. H. R. Niswonger, horticulturist of the N. C. State College Extension Service, points out that it is possible to have fresh vegetables from the home garden on a year-round basis in North Carolina.

During September and October, there are many vegetables which may be planted, Niswonger says. These include winter spinach of the Longstanding and Bloomsdale varieties, Siberian kale, Southern Giant Curled mustard, Purple Top Globe turnips, and Seven Top turnip greens.

Beets and carrots planted the first of September in Eastern Carolina should mature before freezing weather. Cabbage plants of the Charleston Wakefield variety usually will produce heads about Christmas time in the East if planted around Sept. 1.

bage will stand a lot of cold weather.

The horticulturist also recommends green onions as a winter delicacy from the home garden. Put out sets of the Silver Skin variety, and for green onions for next winter and spring set out the multiplying variety.

Niswonger recommends that straw berry plants be fertilized in Eastern North Carolina in early September and in the mountain and northern Piedmont area during late September or early October.

Hal Roach presents THORNE (Topper) SMITH'S HILARIOUS NOVEL "TURNABOUT"

SYNOPSIS The story begins on a normal day at the advertising office of Willows, Manning & Clare which would be an abnormal day anywhere else in the world.

Chapter Two

As for Sally Willows, the dog in her bath "who was too big for the house and too small for the saddle" was really an important matter.

Joel Clare kicked the buzzer for his secretary by mistake, and had

As Tim put it: "The guy swishes, and I don't like swishes." Phil was doing his best. "It isn't that he doesn't care, Mr. Pingboom," he said.

"Conferences! Conferences!" Pingboom shouted, stomping his foot. "Well, either I see Mr. Willows today, or I walk out of the office and never return. That is my decision, and you may consider it final!"

"No, please don't take that attitude, Mr. Pingboom," Tim pleaded. "If you'll pardon me for a moment I'll interrupt Mr. Willows and see if we can't arrange for a definite appointment for you."

He found him preparing for a round of jiu-jitsu with Ito, his Japanese boy. "Listen, Tim," he interrupted. "This is important," Tim replied.

"Where's Mr. Willows?" Pingboom demanded when Phil re-to escape into the reception room. This placed him directly in the unnoticing organizational whirl of Willows, Manning & Clare, making him very unhappy.

Phil Manning's wife called, and when she had hung up he looked at Tim with a well-known look. "That was Marion," he announced. "She's going shopping with your wife and Irene Clare."

Joel, who by this time had been caught outside his office, was miserable while the others were busy taking a photograph of a pretty girl and pineapple juice.

turned. "Ah-ha, that's just the point, Mr. Pingboom," Phil said suavely.

"Oh, you're sorry. Well, I think it's high time you did."

"You see," Phil went on, "it just so happens that he has put aside the entire day to solving the problem of your account, and when I walked in he expressed his displeasure. I'm afraid I disturbed his train of thought."

"It strikes me a little odd that I may not interrupt a man who is in the process of spending $30,000 of my own money?"

"Ah, but don't you see—true genius is ever thus. When you hear what Mr. Willows has worked out for you, Mr. Pingboom, I'm sure you'll agree."

"Tomorrow, sir. Mr. Willows asked me to convey that message to you. Tomorrow, at your convenience..."

Bannister reminded Tim that Dopey was on his way out of the Willows household, which made a good idea mandatory, but soon Bannister had it, too.

"Listen," she told him, "I spend all day in this menagerie. Don't ask me to look at more animals on my own time."

"Do you like dogs?" Tim asked. "Why Mr. Willows?" she purred. "Ah! Just curraaay for dogs... especially those itty-bitty furry ones."

"That's great... get your hat... we're going out to buy one!"

Built On Cotton

Without the pressure of the cotton system the United States would have been a half century later reaching the Rio Grande. Cotton culture has built a civilized society from the forests and plains of a third of the nation's area.

Cotton is the great industrializer and trade-builder. To spin cotton, England produced the first steam-driven machines, initiating the industrial revolution which has remade the world.

Here in the cotton belt, businessmen build their own industrial and commercial structures on the base of the cotton dollar. Just as cotton lifted the ante-bellum planter from frontier subsistence status, so today cotton means cash purchasing power to farmers in eighteen states.

Cotton's power to build a civilized society is truly kingly, truly imperial. Yet it is power that depends on you and us as consumers. It stands or falls on our individual purchases of cotton products.
