Accident Deaths Increase

RALEIGH.— There were 161 deaths last month from what the State Board of Health lists as preventable accidents, as compared with 131 in October, 1939, according to the figures just issued by the Division of Vital Statistics, of which Dr. R. T. Stimpson is the director. The increase registered in October, 1940, was 30. Aside from deaths due to automobile accidents, there were as compared with only 3 during the same period a year ago, while railroad accidents not associated with highway traffic took a toll of 7, a gain of 4 a year ago. Also, there were two air transportation fatalities this year, as compared with none for the corresponding period in 1939, it was pointed out. So far, for the entire year, the death toll in North Carolina from preventable accidents totals 1,196 out of 26,393 deaths from all causes. In other words, those dying from preventable accidents constitute more than four and a half per cent of those dying from all causes. This does not include those who have died from diphtheria and other preventable diseases. There was a sharp decline in the number of births reported last month, as compared with figures for the previous October. For the 1940 period there were 6,776 babies born in North Carolina, or 325 fewer than the 7,101 born in October, 1939. Deaths of 2,442 as compared with 2,523 a year ago, but the number of infants who died under a year old dropped from 388 to 362, a difference of 26 in favor of this year. This brought the infant mortality rate for the month down from 23.8 to 23.

SOME THINGS ARE BEST UNSAID
Some people like to express their opinion on any and every subject under the sun, and at any and all times, regardless of the feeling and opinion of others. Often, such action results in heated arguments, ill will and loss of business and friendship. The avoidance of controversial subjects in any gathering denotes good judgment. To argue religious beliefs and politics can be a pleasant pastime, and then, too such conversation can be the forerunner of quarrels that do lasting harm to the participants. So why engage in useless arguments that convince no one and make you unpopular in business circles and social life.

The Millen (Ga.) News has the following to say on the subject:
"Yes, every one is conceded a right to his or her opinion, but it is to remember that the time, place and manner of expressing them largely determines their effectiveness. Further, there are reconcilable differences which should be left alone."
The editor of the News has brought out one fact worthy of consideration, there are differences which should be left alone. It might be well for all of us to remember this, before we engage in an argument.

10 Points Given For Handling Beef Cattle

L. I. Case, Extension animal husbandman of N. C. State College, says there are 10 fundamental points in beef cattle production. He lists them as follows:
1. Beef cattle cannot be produced economically without utilizing pastures to the maximum.
2. Make use of the less saleable roughage as much as possible, especially with the breeding herd during the winter months.
3. Use a purebred bull, preferably a proven sire. Not only should the should be of good ancestry.
4. Provide a balanced ration, including proteins, necessary minerals and vitamins.
5. Do not construct or maintain costly quarters for beef cattle.
6. Keep animals free from parasites, both internal and external. Feeding parasites is always too expensive.
7. Make an effort to secure a high percentage of calves. The main causes for the low percentage of calf crops are contagious abortion, and lack of attention at breeding and calving time.
8. Conserve the manure. Since the maintenance of soil fertility is a much greater problem than can be satisfactorily met by the use of commercial fertilizers, the proper conservation of manure is an important consideration.

9. Have pigs to follow cattening cattle. One pig or two or three steers will add profit to the enterprise.
10. Guard against disease, especially Bang's disease and tuberculosis.
