WINTER PEAS GAINS VALUE OF NEXT CROP

If handled properly, every acre of Austrian winter peas should be worth $10 and $20 an acre in increased crop yields the first year, says E. C. Blair, agronomy Extension specialist of N. C. State College.

Farmers are now planting these peas, many of which have been furnished by the AAA through its grant of aid plan. Blair said the seedings should be made in September, the earlier the better. He warned that peas planted in October and November will not be large enough to turn under until May.

Austrian winter peas may be planted after corn, cotton, cowpeas soybeans and other crops. They may be turned under in time to plant corn, and in some counties in time for cotton. It is not advisable to plow them in for tobacco. They may be turned under for peanuts, soybeans and cowpeas on sandy soils.

Blair advised sowing 35 to 40 pounds of seed per acre on land where the peas have not been grown before. 25 pounds per acre is sufficient when the peas are drilled in or 30 pounds when broadcasting on land that is well-inoculated.

The agronomist said the seed must be inoculated unless they are to be sown on land that has already been inoculated.
