The state's loan rate is based on a national loan rate of 16.02 cents per pound, which is 85 percent of the parity price of cotton on August 1, 1942. The national loan rate on the 1942 crop was 14.02 cents per pound. All loan rates are based on a 15-16 inch staple and premiums and discounts will be made for better or inferior grades.

Loans are made by the Commodity Credit Corporation and may be obtained until May 1, 1943, through local banks or other lending agencies designated by the Corporation. All loans mature on July 31, 1943, but may be called before that time.

Cornwell said all cotton produced substantially in compliance with provisions of the AAA loan program is eligible for a federal loan at all value. Cotton offered for a federal loan must be and must always have been owned by the person seeking the loan or by that person and a share tenant or share cropper. Cotton received in payment for fixed or standing rent is not eligible for a federal loan.

All applications for cotton loans must be accompanied by warehouse receipts showing the cotton is stored in a government-approved warehouse, he said.

Loans Now Available On 1942 Cotton Crop

Applications now are being received from North Carolina farmers for federal loans on the 1942 cotton crop, according to Tom M. Cornwell, Cleveland County farmer and a member of the State AAA Committee with headquarters at State College. The loan rate North Carolina is 17.41 cents per pound in 45 eastern counties, and 17.46 cents per pound in the rest of the state, the differential being due to freight charges. The lower rate will prevail in Van-
