COURTESY
How sweet and gracious even in common speech
Is that fine grace which men call courtesy?
Wholesome as air and genial as the light
Welcome in every clime as the breath of flowers
It transmutates aliens into trusting friends
And gives its owner passport round the globe
James T. Fields

COUNSEL
No man is so foolish but he may sometimes give another good counsel and no man so wise that he may not easily err if he takes no other counsel than his own
He that is taught only by himself has a fool for a master
Ben Johnson

THIS WAR
We are fighting this war for the preservation of righteousness, law and order but above all for the preservation of the freedom which have been conferred upon us by the glorious heritage of our American citizenship and the freedom in other countries of the United Nations
Ambassador Joseph C. Grew

LOCAL SCHOOLS OBSERVE AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK
This week both the high and elementary schools are holding appropriate programs in observance of the Twenty-second Annual American Education Week
This year the observance is from Nov. 10-16

It is not only important to keep a strong battlefront, but it is important to maintain a strong homefront
Especially is it important to prepare for the future of the children
It is necessary to help them grow into sturdy, upright Americans prepared for the war while it lasts, prepared for the peace when the war is done, prepared to be free citizens of a free world for which we are fighting
The schools of America are dedicated to this cause

There has probably never been a time in the history of America when the services of the school is so essential
Many of the young people now in the schools will soon be directly involved in the war effort
The youth of today will be the adult citizens of tomorrow who will take part in the life of this nation and its destiny
They will make the decisions which will keep our world safe for democracy after it has been won on the battlefronts
Parents are urged to visit the school, during this week
If parents cannot attend one of the planned homecoming days, they should visit the school during the week
The observance of American Education Week will bring the attention of the community to the school

HOME
It is more than a brick and mortar which is the home, it is more than walls and windows, with a hearth to keep us warm
It is more than just a tavern where hungry mouths are fed, or when the journey's end, where we rest our weary head
It isn't just a hang-out when there's nothing else to do, or to which we wander slowly when the night "dotes" are through
It's a haven when we are battered by the tempest of the day; where there's peace and understanding that will chase our cares away
It's the place our hearts return to through our errant feet may roam; its our earthly bit of Heaven; it's that paradise called Home.—Selected.

Here and There

By Haywood E. Lynch

Dr. John R. Cunningham, President of Davidson College who spoke Sunday morning in the First Presbyterian Church brought out two facts that call for serious thought
I repeat them here without further comment
1. For every $2 that is spent in America for education $3 is spent for intoxicating liquors
2. There are twice as many places in America that dispense intoxicating liquors as there are places of worship

Russell Smith has a very patriotic son, who gave birth to a fine gurnsey cat Monday night with a perfect V outlined on its forehead

Kings Mountain will receive some good advertising from the new counter checks of the First National Bank which has an engraving of the monument in the Battleground on it

Dave Saunders is not only an expert cleaner but also a repairer of hats
He got a big hole torn in his headgear at the Bessemer City School fire, but after doing a successful patching job, Dave's flowing locks are kept nice and warm

Hunter and Johnnie Warlick, grandsons of Mrs. A. M. Patterson, Herald Society Editor, are now in the newspaper business
They edited and printed an attractive edition and mailed it to their aunt, Mrs. Dot Etheridge on the Pacific Coast
They showed excellent judgment when they mailed their paper a long ways off because right on the front page was a picture of Yours Truly

Add to Your List of Friendly Public Servants: Little Naomi Edens telephone operator, who always says "Number Please" with a cheerful sound

I don't know who are the highest ranking officers in the Armed Service, from Kings Mountain but I know of two Majors who are O. P. Lewis and Clarence Elsterbe
If anyone knows of others I would like to dubish them

I went out to the Superior Stone Co yesterday afternoon with City Manager M. L. Burdette and believe you me they certainly have a hole in the ground out there
They are getting ready to build a road to the site of the big ammonium plant and work is to begin next week on the track back from the Southern Railroad

I have a very severe critic of this column in the form of my daughter, Betty, who turns to it immediately with receipt of The Herald
Some times she says "Haywood, (all your children call me Haywood) your column was pretty good this week, or there wasn't much to it this time or I thought your column was terrible today"
And if I can please Betty I am doing pretty good

Another faithful Herald reader is my mother in Goldsboro, she keeps up with all the happenings of The Best Town in The State thru the paper edited by her son
I received a letter from her today, (I had not written her for quite sometime) and she said if it wasn't for The Herald she would not know that I existed

Claude Webb of the Imperial told me last night that he was closing down next Monday and Tuesday to remodel and repair the theatre, but would be open Wednesday
I am awaiting with interest Claude's renewed place of business because he'll do a good job

Office For War Information

VA., N. C., S. C., REGIONAL OFFICE

As the military and economic forces of the United Nations begin to equal and in some respects to surpass those of the Axis, the war for freedom becomes more than ever a problem of supply, a fight to speed the war goods we produce into the hands of our naval and air fleets and land armies
We and our lives are beginning to master the many difficult problems connected with supply lines of immense length by adjusting our present shipping facilities to the demands of distant fighting fronts, and by steadily increasing the number of new cargo ships that to deliver the maximum of war materials and fighting men a battle front within the minimum of time means that every inch of cargo space must be examined for its greatest war usefulness

Our good neighbors to the south are invaluable sources of raw materials
Tin comes from Florida, rubber from Brazil, copper from Chile, and a host of other needed products from various parts of Latin America
Because of Axis submarine activity and the needs of other fronts we now have a few fewer vessels for the Latin American trade than we had a year ago
Therefore, although 14 Central and south American republics supply the bulk of our coffee and have large surpluses on hand, we must limit the transportation of coffee in favor of those other products vital to the war
Of course, we must see to it that we have an ample supply of coffee for our men in the armed services
But we civilians can manage on a ration of a pound of coffee every five weeks and that's just what — after November 28 — we are going to have to do
This coffee will go further and taste better if we observe a few simple rules: use fresh coffee, keep it in a tightly covered container in some cool place — use accurate measurements — don't boil, but bring just short of the boiling point — and serve immediately

RAW MATERIALS FRONT SOLSTERED

The raw materials front of the United Nations — a front that, like the fighting front, stretches about the world is strengthened by cooperative planning to secure maximum output of strategic materials regulate the flow of supplies, and exchange information of national resources
When supplies of needed products are insufficient or unobtainable, it is necessary to send experts along with mining machinery to other countries to increase production
The combined raw materials front in some instances, especially in the production of tungsten, is better to speed up results
For example, the machine of sending U. S. tungsten to England for manufacture into ferro-tungsten which was shipped to Canada, has been stopped
We now supply tungsten directly with ferro-tungsten, and instead of sending Russia more manufactured rubber tires made to Russian dimensions we are sending a tire manufacturing plant bought by the Government from the Ford Motor Company

Within our own borders, economic war planning is carried on with increasing vigor
A long range plan for controlling the flow of critical materials into war production — the controlled materials plan — has been put into effect by the War Production Board
The plan tightens control of critical materials and puts into effect a system of allotments to war contractors from available supplies of these materials, in order to assure that war plants can meet production requirements
The first materials to come under the new plan are carbon and alloy steel, copper, and aluminum

CRITICAL STOCKS BEING GATHERED

Critical metals not only are restricted for any but war uses, but existing stocks are being gathered in wherever they may be found
No more copper can be used in building construction and all stocks for building installation in the hands of dealers and others is held to purchase by the Government
Use of stainless steel in more than 15 products, from coffee pots to farm machinery, has been prohibited, and all excess stocks of stainless steel will be redistributed for war use
All stocks of cadmium, used in electroplating, are reserved for war purposes, and platinum which has a wide variety of war uses, such as making of nitric acid and radio tubes — no longer may be used in jewelry manufacture

To save rubber and metals, the manufacture of typewriters, chiefly for the use of the Army and Navy, contracts must be typed and so must military orders and documents
The Government wants to buy standard size machines made since January 1, 1935
Patriotic citizens who wish to dispose of their machines may sell the through authorized local typewriter dealers
Production and distribution of razors and razor blades have been placed under tighter restrictions
Safety razors will be made only for the armed services, razor blades output will be divided between the armed forces, needs of our Land
