

Business Case in Sending Perishables

Atlanta, Ga.—One of the things that mothers and girl friends are urged to remember in to exercise care in sending perishables to their men in the service.

While there is no law that prohibits sending perishables within the continental limits of the United States, there are many considerations that may arise to make what would be good eats today not so good this time next week. and it may be next week before he receives them, according to Captain R. H. McCormack, assistant to the Adjutant General.

For you in war and while your men are in camp today, he may be in another tomorrow, or he may be in the range or temporarily away from the post, and by the time they get to him, the food may be spoiled.

The Army postal officials do all they can to deliver every mail to the soldiers, and they will do it, provided he is there. Another thing that they want a hand in, the old broadcast, the correct address. Even with the correct address, every effort is made to locate the soldier but often by the time he has been located the letters are in a bad state.

In the present program for conservation, it is urged that there be no waste of food. When any food goes to waste it is not just an individual matter, but it is that much less from the nation's supplies. Captain McCormack, and everyone is asked to cooperate. Certain foods may be sent without fear of spoiling, but it is advisable that food be mailed that will keep for at least a week, preferably longer. It will be wise to note this, with Christmas facing us.

Counties Urged To Make Oil Tests of Soybeans

Several North Carolina counties probably will be able to qualify for a 10 cents per bushel premium on soybeans of one or more varieties on the basis of oil content tests, according to G. T. Scott, chairman of the State AAA Committee, with headquarters at N. C. State College.

Under the soybean purchase program now being conducted by Commodity Credit Corporation, a premium of 10 cents per bushel is paid on all soybeans of any class having 17 1/2 percent oil or more. All soybeans produced in North Carolina are considered as having low oil content, unless chemical analyses prove otherwise.

The program provides, Scott declared, that tests may be made of them on a countywide basis or by individual producers. If the county oil soybeans of the class tested will qualify to purchase at 10 cents per bushel, the county will receive the premium.

Individual growers having oil tests made of their soybeans must take samples under supervision of the County AAA Committee, and must pay for the tests. In order to obtain the premium price, producers must present a certification of the tests at the time of sale.

Q.—When should cattle be treated for lice?

A.—Fall is the best season of the year to treat cattle for lice, says L. I. Case, Extension animal husbandman of N. C. State College. The treatments are most effective when the cattle are taken off the grass, while the weather is still fairly warm, and before the cattle are moved to winter quarters. At least two treatments, 14 to 16 days apart, should be made. The first treatment will kill the grown lice, and the second will eradicate the lice that were unhatched at the time of the first treatment.

Q.—What is a good recipe for making sausage?

A.—Extension Service Folder No. 45, which is free upon request to the Agricultural Editor, N. C. State College, suggests the following recipe for making sausage: Use 50 lbs. of pork, three-fourths or when should be lean meat and one fourth fat. Mix 1 pound of fine table salt, 2 1/2 ounces of finely ground black pepper, and 3 ounces of sage, and spread evenly over the meat. Stir the meat well before chopping.

KEEP SMILING Please!

The railroads are doing their best to meet to the full the demands of commerce and the needs of national defense.

We know that, in this great national emergency, you want the railroads to do as they are doing, to put the "needs of national defense" ahead of the "demands of commerce."

So — if railroad passenger service isn't always up to par and you experience inconvenience, or you don't get the accommodations you want — remember, it's wartime and "keep smiling, please!"

This Year We Are Thankful:

- To Our God
- To Our Country
- To Our Soldiers
- To Our Friends and Customers

We are not putting on any show, or spending any money this year to induce buying unnecessary things. Santa will come as usual in a great way. Buy your needs and give the youngsters who do not understand the situation all the cheer and pleasure you feel you can afford. But, we urge buying War Stamps and Bonds to help our boys finish the job of keeping our Country free for Democracy.
