WITH THE BOYS IN SERVICE

Dear Mr. Lynch
Just a few lines to let you know I am receiving the best little paper in the South published in the best little town in the United States. Your paper is enjoyed very much by me and the other boys.
Am receiving your great little paper through the courtesy of Dick King and to him I say: "Thanks a Million!"
By the way, I met Tommy Reynolds when he was returning to his home after being home on furlough and it was really great to talk with someone from the home town.
Hello to all the folks at home and don't worry because this little scrap of news and just as suddenly as it started.
Hello to Harold Phillips. I read your letter "ole boy" Give 'em H— over there. Sincerely,
S-Sgt W N Huffstickler, A S N 14609716 Bat F 1st C A AFO 836 Postmaster New Orleans La

Mom
"Sausage for breakfast! Sausage for breakfast! I can smell 'em!" Small Joe came tumbling downstairs fastening the belt of his shorts as he came. He made a bee-line for the kitchen. Pop was already sitting at the table, reading the paper, while Mom held the handle of the frying-pan over the stove. Small Joe came close and sniffed the delicious smoke, wringing all over with early-morning joy.
"Better be thankful for them while you can still get 'em." One glance at Mom's face told small Joe this was one of her tight-lipped days. "Not a drop of coffee in the house, and no sugar left to put in it if there was some war!" Small Joe kept still.
"Letter for you, son." Pop said in his quiet voice. Small Joe made a leap for his place at table. There it was, a private personal letter for him alone, propped against his milk glass.
"Hey, Pop! It's from brother!" Small Joe was pulling the envelope apart and diving into the contents. "Hey, look what he sent me!" He passed over an oblong of thick, crinkly paper while he leaned over the sheet of writing-paper.
"A twenty-five dollar War Bond." Pop said slowly. Mom turned and looked at it over Pop's shoulder, with the frying-pan in her hand.
"Listen what he says... so you can help me sleep the Java. Aren't you most big enough to get into the Army? Her... for you in your name... the whole family gang up and slip to win this war."
Pop and Mom were silent. But small Joe didn't notice that. He was full of his letter and his War Bond.
"Gee, Pop, in six years I could get into the Army, couldn't I, Pop? Gee, Pop, I want to be a soldier like brother and fight in this war. Gee, isn't that bond nifty? Look, it was issued in Honolulu. It's mine."
But Pop was looking at Mom and Mom was looking at Pop. There were tears in Mom's eyes. She shook her head sharply. Pop reached out and patted her hand gently.
"Well, can't let our soldier boy beat us to buying War Bonds, can we, old lady?" was all he said.
She shook her head again. "I guess if he can give up his job and go off to war I can do some fighting back at home," she said in a queer voice. Small Joe looked up at her in surprise. She saw him looking at her and spoke sharply. "Well, Joe, we're about ready to eat, so grace."
Small Joe folded his hands and bowed his head as he had been taught.
"Oh Lord, we thank thee for this food and all thy bountiful gifts."
"Amen," Pop said. "Now eat your good sausages."
