FOOD CHECKERS

Atkins, Ga. - Food checkers at Army mess halls are the latest move in the war against waste and their theme song is: "eat what you want but don't let your eyes slip bigger than your tummy." It was revealed at the Quartermaster Branch, Headquarters Fourth Service Command.

A mess food checker is a cook or KP, especially detailed for the job and he watches closely as the soldiers file past to "snipe" their plates into the receptacle for leftovers. If he spots a GI whose plate shows too much uneaten food, he gives a short, sharp lecture to the offender and the result officers say, is that Joe Dukes—who was on the receiving end of the talk—will think twice before he again heaps his plate with more food than he can eat.

Another angle is that the checker discovers the kind of food that appears to be unpopular or more filling, for the reason that too many plates had that item of food left. His report on this fact results in the cutting down on the quantity of that item.

Waste has become a fighting word around post mess halls and while the home front is struggling with point ration stamps, the Army continues to expand its program of food conservation through a plan of rigid supervision and education done with Sunday driving in the old system of issuing Army rations on the basis of company strength in its place is the new program of issuing food according to the number of men actually eating at the detachment mess.

One of the first steps in food conservation was the checking by Army unit inspectors of company kitchens for excess stocks. This surplus was turned back to the Quartermaster and later released to units that were short on these particular rations.

The story of coffee and canned goods has been told, but the Army cooks are bearing down harder than ever on the instructions to use canned fruits and vegetables only when the fresh varieties are not available. As to coffee, a self-imposed rationing of that commodity was in effect at posts and camps long before the civilians felt the pinch—if any—of a pound every 30 days. It was, and is simply this: instead of serving coffee three times a day or 30 times a month, an Army post mess is served coffee not more than 40 times a month.

Meat drippings and fats are used over and over again in cooking until there is no value left, then they are salvaged.

WITH THE BOYS IN SERVICE

At Sea, Feb. 14, 1942

Dear Raymond:

Water, water, everywhere. Now I would like to see you in front of all just N. C. That would be close enough to E. S. Blue, good old U. S. A. I haven't been one with all don't think to be. This war is too big, involving a good class too. It's kinder rough today but has been very smooth for February.

We are headed for North Africa to finish running the Germans out of there. All the boys from E. S. are on here with me. I'll bet there are never less as many Kings Mountain boys crossed the Atlantic together as we. There are 7 of us. Some have been sick, and all feeling good.

Went to church Sunday in the middle of the ocean, believe it or not.

We are only 5 miles from land, STRAIGHT DOWN! but we are not going that way. Thanks are all up and going higher. This is one trip I never forget and can tell you about it sometime. We are not scared. We have plenty of protection, in about all I can tell.

I haven't had a paper in a month. Just as well send it to my wife until I can get a permit to get it. I hope I can. Is there anybody left in K. B. now?

Heat of luck to everybody, and hope few have to take this ride. Look out Berlin, here we come!

WE THREE SEE ALL

Goodness! Now we know summer is near. If you had been out at the Lake over the week end, you would know why. Some of the gang went Friday night, and some Saturday morning. Funny thing, Marion and Max both showed up! There was quite a crowd out there Sunday afternoon, all the freshmen (almost almost all) with Edgy Hayes and Peggy Morris acting as admit visitors. How many did you save Betty? On to a warmer subject than cold water - This thing called LOVE - It is really the thing, eh? Martha McChain and Fig Deese? Kat Hill hears from Bill Laughter pretty often. Special delivery, too. Coyt Paycor and Peggy Smith seem to have rekindled the flame - good going Coyt. Steady couples seem to be few now days. Would you ever guess that Luanne Holston is out (as she puts it) over over Harold Glass? Who is the latest with Avis Mae? - Oh that's simple - David Neill. The sixty-four dollar question is: WHO HOLDS JIMMY BURNS' HEART? Can you tell? - We can't tell. What a gorgeous sun tan you have Mr. Tompkins. By the way, Hazel Falls is in town, not bad, boys. Hel on Tidwell and Deb never seem to complete. Cuts couple, too. Dicks don't do that, you NIGHT make Mary mad. Frances White has over of her love for the duration for Bruce - cute gal. Bruce! - Only three weeks, or 15 days, or 30 more hours of school. We can't wait. Can you? (We have to).
