Serious Protein Feed Shortage Has Developed

A serious shortage of protein feeds in North Carolina and throughout the Southeast for poultry, swine and cattle was indicated at a feed conservation and production conference held on May 4 and 5 at Greensboro. Officials of the State College Extension Service, the State Department of Agriculture and other cooperating agricultural agencies met with the oil millers, feed processors and livestock and poultry growers to work out methods of dealing with the shortage.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that there were about enough proteins to last only one month, actually is right. The ordinary supplies of cottonseed and soybean meal have "mysteriously disappeared." Fish meal and bone meal are not to be had. Corn at a ceiling price of $1.05 is now coming out of the West, where corn marketed through hogs is bringing about $1.50 a bushel. Cottonseed meal at $55.00 per ton has produced a "black market."

North Carolina's largest poultry grower, with 25,000 layers and 35,000 pullets, reported that he had just enough proteins for about a month and other growers said they had enough for about two weeks of heeding. One county agent reported that he could haul all of the feed in his county in feed dealers hands in one truck. Feed processors were clamoring for supplies of proteins and corn, saying they would be forced out of business in a few weeks unless help came.

Pres. J. B. Hutson of the Commodity Credit Corporation asserted that the supply of proteins for the U. S. was not alarming at this time and that present livestock could be fed, if proteins were conserved. However, plans were not fully worked out for relieving the protein shortage in the Southeast.

The Extension and other agricultural officials present urged North Carolina farmers to feed just as efficiently as possible and to make every pound of protein count. Several changes in feed formulas were recommended, to conserve proteins.

On account of the huge increase in poultry and livestock the demand for proteins in this State is about 70 percent above last year, covering the past four months. Growers were urged to increase their acreage of high protein crops, wherever possible.

C. B. Prowell of South Carolina, Area Director of the Feed Industry Council, said: "I want to see us get some proteins to conserve. We are practically out. Some mills are closed and others are working part time. In some areas the demand is almost double what it was last year."

About 1,250,000 troops a month travel on American trains in official troop movements, exclusive of furlough travel.

In the Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas area, 40 retail florists formed a joint plan for handling orders which is expected to save 150,000 truck-miles a year.
