What You Buy With WAR BONDS
 Battle of the Atlantic
 A sinking smokestack, a great air bubble, an empty lifeboat, all that is visible of a torpedoed tanker, all that is evidence of the hard work, the savings we put into War Bonds to build this tanker, to load it with 50,000 gallons of high octane gas.
 Our money is still safe but the tanker is lost forever. Another and another and another must be built to take its place.
 The men who sail the seas are giving their lives to win the Battle of the Atlantic. We are asked only to lend our money.

THIS AND THAT
 By H. Y. Bell
 We won't have any old maids left on hand around Kings Mountain if our soldier boys don't quit marrying our little girls. Probably the girls realize they won't be enough soon to go around after the war is over. Probably too they fear becoming old maids. We have so many old sullen bachelors around here, however, our lady maids in Kings Mountain are fine women. I can't call them old maids. They are just maids by chance or choice. I fear, after the war is won, we will have more grass hopper widows than the law allows. I hope every one of those sweet, smart girls in this town will find a road from the marriage vows to the grave—one sweet, blissful journey strewn with flowers, but their maid heads be some sorrow to make one realize how fragrant are the flowers strewn along the wedded pathway. Life is a grand, sublime, glorious gift. If only we knew how to meet these everyday problems, we should profit by the mistakes of yesterday, and ever look to the future of tomorrow. With faith, love and hope, Hope is the only anchor to the soul. May it be sure and steadfast. Mother, father, sweet hearts, you know how we pray and hope and trust in him—that doth all things well that our loved ones will one day be restored to us safe. Then will the praises re-echo through about the world, praise to Lord for our loved ones. Heaven and earth will be reunited. Peace, wonderful peace!

Potato Price Support To Continue in State
 U. S. Department of Agriculture support price on Irish potatoes will be continued in North Carolina throughout the entire marketing season and it is not necessary for growers to dig potatoes prematurely in order to obtain price at the support level, according to H. A. Patten, state AAA executive assistant.
 The Department announced earlier this year that it would support the 1945 crop of Irish potatoes at $2.25 per 100 pounds for No. 1 potatoes in cartoned lots. Potatoes grading at least 85 percent No. 1 will be supported at $2.25 per 100, and U. S. Commercial will be supported at $2.05 per hundred. The support price for potatoes grading No. 2 or U. S. No. 1 size B will be supported at $1.25 per 100 pounds. The ceiling price at which growers may sell potatoes in North Carolina is $2.70 per hundred.

Deliver us from evil
 Figure It Out Yourself. How can you effectively help in saving all the little children of the world from human slavery, death and misery from the Nazis and Japanese? Put more and more of your pay into war bonds every payday. Your savings will go to war in the form of war equipment and other supplies. How much more should you put into war bonds? The only ones who can answer that are you and your family. It's up to you to decide just how much more you'll do to win the war.

Chicken Deaths Reduced by Breeding
 Selecting chickens for livability rather than altogether for high production has brought about a new era in poultry breeding, says Dr. C. M. Houston, associate in poultry science at the Agricultural Experiment Station, N. C. State College.
 Under ordinary conditions many poultrymen lose about 25 percent of their pullets during the first year. In a test conducted by Houston, where matings were made from stock not bred for improved livability, the loss was 23 percent. With another group of birds, kept under exactly the same conditions but from matings selected for improved livability, the loss was only 11 percent.
 Houston says that these and other investigations show clearly that livability can be improved by breeding and suggests that poultrymen take advantage of this fact in purchasing replacement stock.
 In commenting on the tests, Houston reports that some poultrymen have been culling frequently and carefully to avoid some mortality. He points out, however, that every cull represents a loss in food and housing space used, and labor expended. Since many would die if they were not removed, they may be considered the same as mortality.
 Under feed shortage conditions, the fact that mortality in chickens can be considerably reduced thru improved methods of breeding is of great significance.

In the Midwest war production is down 2,200 war plants reported a 60 percent increase within this in the employment of women workers.
