Kings Mountain!

END OF THE LINE FOR JOE— OR JUST A STOP-OVER?

What kind of a town is Kings Mountain going to be after the war? Is it going to be able to attract, to keep and hold the returning soldier as a citizen, worker and buyer? Is it going to continue its march ahead—or is it going to go to seed? Will there be planning, recreational planning, planning for better schools—in a word, planning for living? It all depends on the amount of thought and co-operation that is given to the problems now! A few months from now may be too late because pretty soon the soldiers will be coming home.

When Joe left home a couple of years ago, he knew what he was going to do after the war. He was coming right home to Kings Mountain. He was going to take up his old job at the mill, or driving a truck, or maybe he was going back to school.

Right now Joe isn't so sure. He's been around. He's seen things. Between campaigns and combat missions, Joe has had the chance to do some thinking. It's sort of given him the itch to move on. Maybe to bigger things and better opportunities he's heard about. Maybe just for change of scene.

Joe has heard and read a lot about the good jobs, the bigger futures in Detroit, Chicago, Dallas, Seattle, Places where he can use those new service-taught skills he's learned. Places he can make money in, enough to settle down and raise a family.

Yet—deep in his heart, Joe doesn't want to leave Kings Mountain. Kings Mountain is home. He sort of likes the old town. Joe and all his other buddies would rather grow with Kings Mountain IF Kings Mountain IS READY TO GROW WITH THEM.

Our returning servicemen and women want a LIVE town! They want a town with home industries, modern stores, good schools, good government... a town with a future. They want the sort of town that we can help Kings Mountain become if we start NOW!

Your Druggist

—HAS DRUGS HE WILL NOT SELL YOU!

That is, except on your doctor's prescription. The miracle-working sulfa drugs, for example. The simple and sensible reason is that many drugs require the physician's supervision in their use to eliminate possibility of great harm.

For the public's protection, therefore, your druggist follows the wise rule never to sell the layman a drug that he can not safely use by observing label directions. For in unknowing hands even the drugs that have possibilities of positive benefits can be disastrously damaging.

So it is that your druggist stocks many an item you never see. His professional knowledge tells him when to say "no"—when to restrict all sales to the doctor's specific order.

And so it is that your druggist oftentimes protects by refusing to sell!
