

MARINES RECOVER CHINA
Back in China, where in the past they enjoyed comparative luxury after the gruelling hardships of life and war on battered Pacific Islands.

Probably the biggest attraction to the men of the famed First Division on their first "liberty" at Tientsin is the Chinese baths—a most welcome change from helmet and makeshift oil drum showers.

At Peiping, Marines have found for the first time anywhere that their snappy dress "blues" pass unnoticed. The reason: In China everybody has a colorful uniform. Police wear black and gold; postal workers are attired in bright green; messengers and train guards have black and gold uniforms, and red and tan are worn by some Chinese army groups.

More About Myron Rhyne
This theater has served in various capacities primarily connected with supply functions. Through considerable initiative and outstanding devotion to duty he was instrumental in the establishment of the present efficient supply procedure now in effect throughout this theater. This supply procedure sets forth the prescribed methods of stock control, requisitioning, storage and issue consistent with the peculiarities of this vast theater. As a result a continuous flow of supplies have been received without any noticeable accumulation of excess; thus resulting in the saving of considerable expense to the government and conservation of critical shipping facilities. Major Rhyne also was responsible for the formulation of Standing Operating Procedures which effectively synchronized the functions of bakeries, laundries, and clothing and equipment repair shops in his theater. His diversified knowledge of Quartermaster procedures was invaluable assistance in the preparation, clarification and dissemination of policies to lower echelons.

"By his consistent efforts to standardize supply procedure and his constant devotion to duty Major Rhyne has reflected high credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States.

B. F. Giles,
Major General, U. S. Army
Commanding A. M. E. T., APO 787."

ments will be accepted without notes, but these short letters will do much to build international good will and banish war forever."

Following is a "thank-you" letter from a recipient of clothing collected in the drive last spring:

"My husband and I are deeply touched by the kindness shown by our American friends who have felt pity for our sufferings and have wanted to soften them by relieving our distress. It is with a heart very moved that we address our thanks to the generous and devoted donors. We shall preserve forever a great and eternal gratitude."
