Girls Scouts Enjoy Spook Party

The Woman's club house was the scene of enjoyable entertainment on Tuesday evening when the Girl Scouts' troop 12 of Central Methodist church was hostess to all the Girl Scouts in town.

The traditional color scheme of black and orange was carried out, and on one wall a huge ghost, dressed in a white costume, looked down on others, dressed to compete with him. The beauty of the forest was brought into every corner of the room with beautifully colored leaves and fat yellow pumpkins with large red cheeks added to the festiveness of the occasion.

Fifty scouts, along with their leaders, enjoyed an evening of Halloween games and pranks which consisted of a House of Horrors — and from all reports, it was as good as the name implied; apple bobbing was very popular with large, delicious, juicy apples tempting all who passed by; a partner and song game, which brought to the surface hidden talent along with loads of fun; and for those who wished to trust their sense of touch, a chance was offered to pin the hat on a huge Peter Pumpkin for a prize. The fortune tellers booth was a busy place every minute, with deep, dark secrets of the future revealed by the fortune teller.

Later in the evening, a ring was formed gypsy-style and in the center, two of the Scouts tested their speed by dressing from a week end bag that contained every kind of wearing apparel for a well-dressed lady. This brought forth peals of laughter.

No Halloween party would be complete without a fashion show. This was carried out in true fashion style with Betty Ford as winner for the best costume. This was a difficult job for the judges, who reported they had never seen a better dressed crowd for Halloween.

After the games, the girls of Troop 12 served cookies, peanuts and Devil's - Eye punch, then, in the true Girl Scout spirit, every girl who participated in the fun, pitched in to clean house and in twenty minutes time, the clubhouse was as clean as when the first guest stepped through the front door.

An evening of clean fun and whole some entertainment was the reward of those who worked so faithfully to make the party the success that it was.
