Herald Installs New Intertype Typesetting Machine; Appearance Of Paper Changed

The Herald installed last week end a new typesetting machine, designed to facilitate production and to improve the appearance of the newspaper.

The new machine, manufactured by Intertype Corporation of Brooklyn, N. Y., has many improvements over the machine formerly in use.

Most evident to Herald readers will be the change in face of type. Today's edition is printed from the new body type face called Regal, replacing the old type which was Merghenthaler Linotype company's Devigny. In addition, the Herald can now print from the same size of type set on the machine, whereas only two were available on the machine replaced.

The Herald staff believes that the new type is more legible than the old type and will therefore aid readers of the paper. In addition, new headlines will be printed with larger type which will enable the Herald to offer more correct news.

Advertisements will benefit in that their advertising copy will be presented in a more attractive manner. It is the hope of the Herald staff that the new type will aid in the greater readability of the paper.

Board In Favor Of Cities Sharing Gasoline Tax

In regular January meeting Tuesday night, the city board of aldermen saw new board member D. L. Saunders sworn in office, endorsed the North Carolina League of Municipalities efforts concerning the state gasoline tax, and attended to other routine details of city business.

The North Carolina League is advocating:

- (1) That one cent per gallon of the six-cent state tax be pro-rated to the cities for street work, and
- (2) That cities be exempted from paying the state gas tax on purchases of gas for use by municipalities.

The local board took no action on several other League platform planks to be presented to the General Assembly. They include (1) raising of the tax limitation for general fund purposes to $1.50 per $100 valuation (now $1.00), (2) elimination of discounts for tax pre-payments, and (3) giving to the city property confiscated by city officers when apprehending gambling activities (these funds now go to the school funds.)

Otherwise the board confirmed sale of a tract of city land to Sam Jackson, colored. The 3.62 acres sold adjoined Jackson's farm and was a part of the city lake property. Jackson paid $362 for the 3.62 acres.

The board also ordered the placing of "no parking" signs on the east side of Piedmont avenue from the Southern Railway crossing North to beyond the intersection of Piedmont with the Waco road. Unlimited parking will still be permitted on the west side of the street.

The hearing of regular monthly reports completed the board session. H. L. Burdette, city manager said.

No Damage Reported In Two Minor Fires

Two fires, in addition to the Presbyterian church fire of Sunday, were reported last week by Grady King, chief of the Kings Mountain fire department.

On Saturday, about 4 p. m. firemen answered a call to the old Baptist parsonage on King street to extinguish a small blaze, caused when a spark set the shingle roof on fire. There was no major damage to the home according to Mr. King.

Tuesday night at around 9 p. m. firemen were called to King street again, this time to put out a small fire in a truck. Mr. King reported "no damage."

Supply Of Milk Bottles Short

Sunrise Dairy, one of the larger milk producers in the Kings Mountain area, is advertising for regular return of bottles to assure continued adequate supplies of milk.

L. A. Wolfe, official of the Gastonia concern, said this week that shortage of soda ash, used in glass manufacture, and increased demands on glass manufacturers by automobile manufacturers made the outlook black for obtaining regular supplies of bottles during 1947.

Fire in First Presbyterian church here early last Sunday morning caused damage estimated at $20,000 and forced the Kings Mountain fire department to battle the blaze for almost two hours before getting it under control. Firemen answered the call around 8:50 a. m.

Believed to have started when the fan switch is a space heater, located in the Fellowship Hall of the church, stuck and ignited the surrounding walls, the blaze was estimated to have had more than an hour's start on firemen when through the ceiling into the main auditorium of the church, located directly above.

Major damage resulted from the heavy smoke and intense heat as carpets, window panes, pews, and fixtures in the main auditorium received heavy damage. Water also caused considerable damage to the interior of the church as firemen fought to keep the fire from spreading to the oil furnace.

No one was in the building at the time, discovery of the fire coming from the parsonage, located next door. A heavy blanket of fog prevented possible earlier evidence of the smoke from the fire.

Several firemen were almost overcome by the heavy smoke but Chief Grady King reported no one very seriously injured in the fighting.

Parishioners were called in to aid in the clean-up work after the fire and many of the members showed up dressed for the work.

At a family night supper meeting of the congregation, held at Womans club last night, a committee in charge of repairing the damage was announced and the membership expressed appreciation to the firemen for extinguishing the fire and to the other church congregations for their interest. The congregation also stated appreciation for the use of the Woman's club.

Dr. Langdon Henderlite, out standing missionary from Brazil, was the speaker at last night's meeting.

The committee includes Dr. W. L. Hanson, Joe Thomson, Hunter Reisinger, Paul Mauney, Ector Harrell, Mrs. C. E. Neisler, and Mrs. O. W. Myers.

Rev. P. D. Patrick said the members would visit other churches this Sunday and would meet at the Woman's Club Sunday, January 26.

Max Washburn Resigns Post

Following announcement by Max Washburn that he would resign as a member of the board of county commissioners on February 4 and Clerk of Court Everett Houser's statement that he would appoint as commissioner the citizen recommended by the Democratic executive committee, names of Tom Cornwell, Henry McKinney and J. D. Elliott were projected Wednesday as possibilities for the vacancy.

Mr. Houser is empowered by law to fill the vacancy.

Meantime, Clyde Nolan, of Shelby, Democratic chairman, said there would be no rush to make a recommendation but he indicated it would be made in time for the scheduled February 17 meeting of the board.

Commissioner Washburn, veteran board member, tendered his resignation in a letter Monday to Mr. Houser and D. D. Lattimore, board chairman. Mr. Washburn stated, "My doctors have advised me to slow down."

He also wrote, "There are two happy days in the life of a man in public office—the day he is elected and the day he steps out..."

In deferring to the Democratic Executive committee for the commissioner nominee, Mr. Houser said that he felt a consensus of opinion would be better than the opinion of one man on a matter "of so much importance."

All three prominently mentioned for the post are farmers of the Shelby area. Since Glee A. Bridges is the Kings Mountain representative on the board, it is assumed that the appointee will come from the Shelby area.

Jackson Arrested For Draft Evasion

Norman Jackson, local Negro, was picked up here this week by the Shelby FBI agent on a Federal warrant charging him with evading the draft laws.

Jackson was ordered to report to the board for orders three months ago but failed to show up.

Police here say that the man has been in Kings Mountain and apparently did not try to leave town.

In order that Herald readers may compare the new style of body type with the old, printed below is a story appearing in last week's society columns in both the old and new faces. The Herald thinks the new type is both easier to read and more pleasing to the eye.
