

Vets Lose To Waldese 5-1

Kings Mountain Vets dropped a close 5 to 1 game to the cellar-dwelling Waldese Waldensians in City Stadium Friday night, Don Parker going the route for the locals.

Saturday night's game, scheduled for Waldese, was rained out.

Feature of the game was the fielding of Shootstop Harris of the Waldensians. Harris fielded three probable base hits for put-outs and caught a runner off base, his brilliant playing, saving possibly four Vet runs. He made following each snap-play he made.

Charles Ballard led the Vet stick-work on Pitcher Flack, garnering a walk and two singles. Bill Halyburton had two for four, and Gaffney singled in the only Vet run in the first inning.

Juniors Drop Second, 11-6

Kings Mountain Juniors dropped their second elimination game in as many days, this time to Forest City Juniors by a score of 11 to 6, June 10th in Forest City falling behind after scoring five runs in the first inning.

Dyeing Preparations
 An indispensable prerequisite to effective dyeing is to have the article washed and thoroughly rinsed. It is recommended that you remove all buttons, buckles and trimmings and rip out hems, pleats and linings to permit the dye to penetrate evenly through the fabric. All stains should be taken out. If the article is unevenly faded, the color should be removed first. The vessels to be used should be agate ware, enamel ware, monel or stainless steel. (Iron, galvanized iron, aluminum and copper vessels should be avoided since the metals have a dulling effect on the color.) The dyeing vessel should be sufficiently large to hold the article without crowding. The only additional equipment required is a smooth stick or wooden spoon for moving the article about in the dye bath. Some dyes require the addition of salt or vinegar to the dye solution.

other organizations are furnishing hybrid seed corn in an effort to further boost per acre yields.
 "That's fine," I says. Then I asked the agent if he was expecting any thing outstanding in the way of extra-high yields.
 "It's hard to say—right now—" he answered, "but they'll have to go some to beat the record."
 Then he told me about A. S. Tussey, a fine old gentleman who is still actively engaged in farming out of Lexington on Route 6.

 "Thirty years ago," Agent Brown related, "Mr. Tussey broke up a piece of meadow land on Swearing Creek, used a thousand pounds of sixteen percent acid phosphate on it, and added 200 pounds of a complete fertilizer in the rows at planting time. His resulting yield, verified and measured by the county agent of the day—W. G. Yeage—was 130 bushels and three pecks of corn on a single acre! That record, Cousin, set in 1916, still stands as tops for Davidson county, as far as we are able to determine."

 "With a mark like that to shoot at," I says, "farmers over here certainly do have plenty of inspiration!"

Greatest Waterfalls
 The greatest waterfalls in the Americas are not the tremendous cataracts of New York's Niagara but the Brazilian and Argentine Falls of Iguassu. Forty feet higher, and half again as wide as Niagara, the Falls of Iguassu thunder from the heights of 210 feet in a virgin forest 11 miles from the junction of Brazil's Iguassu river with the Rio Parana. Known also as Iguazu, a Guarani Indian term meaning "Great Waters," the falls in dry seasons form two distinct crescents known as the Brazilian and Argentine Falls, each about 800 yards in width. In the rainy seasons of the year, when the Iguassu river is at flood, the two crescents join in an awe-inspiring cascade which is sometimes 4,000 yards in width, the most tremendous natural waterfall in the world. The names given to sections of the falls testify to the mingled feelings of affection and awe with which the people regard Iguassu. On the Argentine side, for example, are the San Martin falls, named for Argentina's great liberator, the Two Sisters, the Three Musketeers, and the Devil's Throat.

Sun Plant
 The Sun plant (portulaca grandiflora), a relative of the common pursley weed of gardens, finds in a sunny location the ideal place in which to grow. Portulaca is one of the most brilliant annuals, and may be used in several ways. It grows from four to six inches high, depending on the soil conditions, and has red, yellow and white flowers and also a fragrant sort, rose colored and curiously striped. The flowers open in the morning, close at night, but because of its sunny habitat, requiring warmth for full development, it begins to flower from June and continues throughout the summer and until cut down by frost. There are both single and double varieties. The doubles, when fully expanded, resemble a fully blown rose. There are few flowers so easy to grow and they are useful as an edging plant, to ramble over the rockery, and when sown in mass produce a dazzling effect. The plant self-sows, with some doubles reverting to the single type. It is easy to fill bare spots by taking cuttings and simply inserting them in the soil, where they take root.

The City Cousin
 With corn production contests being received with such enthusiasm on Tar Heel farms this year, I thought as long as I was in Lexington I'd see what Davidson County farmers were doing.
 "Well, Cousin," says John Brown, farm agent for the State College Extension Service there, "some mighty interesting prizes are being offered in several corn contests in the county this year, and some civic clubs and
