

PORTRAIT BY KINGS MOUNTAIN ARTIST UNVEILED—One of the highlights of the celebration on July 7 of the 25th anniversary of Carlton Mills of Cherryville was the unveiling of an oil portrait of Carl A. Rudisell, president and founder of the company. The portrait, painted by J. L. Settlemire, Kings Mountain artist, was presented to the Carlton people, on behalf of his father, by Ben E. Rudisell, treasurer and general manager, who is standing behind the American flag. Directly behind him is State Senator R. Grady Rankin. At Home On The Farm with The City Cousin

I had to have a few tomato plants to finish up my garden so I drove over to the little place that advertised in the newspapers:

The old gentleman that ran the place had all kinds of plants—six or seven varieties of tomatoes, sweet and hot peppers, brocoli, cabbage and sweet potatoes.

After I had picked out my tomato plants, I waited my turn in the line that gathered around the old man as he carefully wrapped the tender plants in moist earth and got them ready for the trip from his beds to the garden.

It was n't until he had my plants all ready to go that I discovered I didn't have any money with me. When he told me how much I owed him, I asked if it would be all right to write a check for the amount.

"Course it's all right," he says. "But you don't know me—" I protested.

"I didn't know that last farmer that paid for three thousand sweet potato plants by personal check, either," he tells me in a slow drawl. "I trust 'em all—because in twenty years of selling plants from these beds I've never been handed a bad check."

Then I asked him how he accounted for his good luck, and he replied: "No luck to it, son—just human nature. The way I look at it, there seems to be an un-explainable streak of honesty about most everybody that grows things in the soil." I took my plants and went home, wondering about the faith that farmers and home gardeners had inspired in the old man.

TUESDAY FIRE

Kings Mountain firemen were called to the home of Lucille Elders on Ridge street about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to extinguish a small blaze. Damage was slight.
