

Pass Interceptions, Fumble, Lead To Downfall; Central Drops 27-0

Collyer Advocates New School Course, "The American Way"

"The young men and women of America should be provided a sound understanding of America's greatness", so believes John L. Collyer, president, The B. F. Goodrich Co. Collyer was recently cited by Forbes Magazine as one of America's fifty foremost business leaders.

"The American Way of Life, as enjoyed by millions of Americans, is a mode of civilized living which has to some degree affected the entire world, and yet is an intangible quality which most Americans find difficult to explain", Collyer believes. He has recommended that a comprehensive course on this subject be adopted by American secondary schools and universities as a required subject.

"The struggle to preserve our way of life has been felt in every American home," the B. F. Goodrich president points out, "and has affected every family pocket-book through high prices, defense appropriations and foreign aid."

"Americans in general believe they are enjoying the highest standard of living ever achieved in the history of mankind. And yet they find it difficult to put into so many words, a definition of how this has come about or the factors that have enabled the United States to successfully assist other nations in resisting world aggression."
