

Typical of "long-life" product tests conducted by manufacturers of today, is one involving a refrigeration unit that has been in continuous operation at the Frigidaire engineering laboratories for 27 years—since 1932—and is still running.

You could make the equivalent of 1,900 round-trips per year to the moon, if you traveled the more than a billion miles which GM coaches roll up annually over practically every highway in the country and in the majority of cities.

765,409 Cars Checked During '48 Inspection

RALEIGH. — The Motor Vehicle Department announced today that its Mechanical Inspection Division checked a total of 765,409 vehicles during 1948.

A total of 1,258,994 inspections were required to check these vehicles, since many had defects on the first visit to the lanes and had to return two or more times before they were approved.

The inspection report showed that 314,294 vehicles, or 41 percent, were approved on their first visit to the lanes, while the remaining 451,115, or 59 percent, were rejected on their initial visit and had to have defects corrected before they received their blue seals of approval.

A total of 991,042 defects were found on all vehicles checked. Of these, 20 per cent were for defective headlights, 24 percent for other lighting defects, 22 percent for poor brakes, 14 percent for steering deficiencies, and the remaining 20 percent were for all other defects, including horn, mirror, windshield wiper, windshield, tires, and exhaust system.

Nearly 200 of the nation's famous name passenger trains are hauled by General Motors Diesel locomotives.
