neral rites. The late Rev. E. B. Hunter of Sharon was credited with responsibility for starting the investigation that implicated King. The pastor had called at the King home to arrange for funeral services and saw evidence that something had been burned in the fireplace. He reported this, and after a few days, the body was disinterred from Mountain Rest cemetery. Autopsy showed that Mrs. King had not died from poisoning, as it had first appeared. Carbolic acid burns appeared on her lips, but not in the victim's stomach. The autopsy also showed cord marks on the victim's throat, the clue to the choking.

Due to the high feeling regarding the death of the pretty and popular Mrs. King, the case was tried under change of venue at Chester rather than in York.

The defense, led by Clyde R. Hoey, now U. S. Senator, entered an appeal, and the South Carolina Supreme Court ordered a new trial, this time at Lancaster, S. C. He was again convicted, but this time with a recommendation for mercy. On May 8, 1931, the late Judge C. C. Featherstone sentenced King to life imprisonment.

All requests for clemency had been turned down by the South Carolina Probation, Parole and Pardon board, one time recently when Senator Hoey inquired again about the possibility of King's release on parole. One report of the board said King had a "bad" prison record.

Death of King was attributed to a heart attack and funeral rites were held Wednesday afternoon at Shelby at the home of his mother.
