

Consumers Urged To Eat More Eggs; Hens Are Laying Like Blue Breeze

Miss LaUna Brashers, Cleveland County home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service, this week urged housewives to take advantage of abundant egg supplies by using eggs not only for breakfast but in lunch and dinner menus as well.

Miss Brashers explained that egg production in December, according to the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, was 12 per cent above December of the previous year and 50 per cent above average production for the month for the past 10 years.

Crop Body Buys Dixie 17 Best Corn Performer

Official variety tests in the Coastal Plain and Piedmont regions show that Dixie 17 white hybrid corn outyielded N. C. 27 yellow but that the latter variety is superior in grain quality, stalk strength, and weevil resistance, the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association reported this week.

In the tests, which were conducted from 1947 through 1949, Dixie 17 outyielded the best open-pollinated white variety by 40 per cent, N. C. 27 outyielded the best open-pollinated yellow variety by 26.1 per cent in the Piedmont and 21.4 per cent in the Coastal Plain.

Both hybrids have become very popular in North Carolina since 1947 and are replacing older, less desirable hybrids such as N. C. 26 and Tenn. 10.

The facts are disclosed in the 1950 edition of "Measured Crop Performance," which contains a report on the official state-wide crop performance tests for 1949 and variety recommendations for 1950. Issued as Bulletin No. 368 of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station, the publication may be obtained free from the local county agent or by writing the Agricultural Editor, State College Station, Raleigh.

VA Offering New Artificial Leg

After three years of scientifically controlled testing and development, Veterans Administration is making the suction socket artificial leg available to eligible veterans who have suffered leg amputations above the knee of a character which makes its use medically feasible.

VA said that during the past two years, it had tested more than 500 amputee veterans in its experimental program on the suction socket leg. Successful results were obtained in a great majority of the cases, VA said.

The above-knee artificial leg differs from the conventional artificial leg in that it has no pelvic hinges or suspension harness. The leg is held to the stump by moderate suction created in the closed socket each time the leg is lifted from the ground in walking.

The suction socket leg is designed to give greater freedom of movement in all directions, appears more like part of the body and does away with the discomfort of the pelvic belt (a heavy belt with steel hinge fitted to the waist).

With the joint cooperation of the Advisory Committee on Artificial Limbs of the National Research Council, University of California, Orthopedic Appliance and Limb Manufacturers Association, the Army, Navy and other interested organizations, the VA sponsored an extensive program to determine the possibilities and limitations of the suction socket limb.

Besides the more than 500 veterans who were tested in the VA program, a much larger number of non-veterans amputees have been fitted with successful results by the artificial limb industry.

Effective January 18, 1950, the suction socket leg was made available, upon request, to eligible disabled veterans through the established artificial limb program of the VA.

When a new limb is required to replace an unserviceable limb previously issued to the veteran, the suction socket leg may be selected by the amputee upon medical prescription by a surgeon certified by the VA. A list of certified surgeons has been distributed to all VA Regional Offices, Hospitals and Centers.

VA emphasized that no suction
